Dr. Keeley on Alcohol.

It was held by sundry learned physicians work with less fatigue than he could without it. Nobody drinks alcohol and scarce-ly any one drinks anything else by ounces, but whisky is about one half alcohol, and an ounce and a half of alcohol reduced to terms suited to the popular understandng means about four fingers of American whisky, or two or three glasses of claret r maybe a couple of pints of beer. So anch these learned gentlemen say a man can drink, day in and day out, and live on

Dr. Keeley, the sagacious inventor of the Keeley cure, comments in the New York Sun upon these conclusions of his European brethern. His animadversions are interesting. He does not deny that an ounce and a half of alcohol can be mptied daily into an average man at his meals without doing him physical damage. It is true, he says, that the temperate use of alcohol has not been proved to be nurtful to the nations of Europe, but that, e says, is because no European nation has ver used alcohol temperately. There is o such thing, he says as habitual temper ate drinking, except by a small class, equal or compare with it as a CURATIVE any of the enlightened nations. The tem-and HEALING APPLICATION. It has been perate class he finds to be made up not of perate class he finds to be made up not of people who habitually drink in moderation, but "of those who very occasionally take a drink. Yet he agrees with the doctors of the con gress that the enlightened nations are the quor drinking nations, and that enlightnent and inebriety seem to go hand in and. He accounts for it by the curious eory that alcohol has developed man, ot as his friend but as his enemy, Man. ne thinks, grows strong by fighting rum, ust as he does by fighting cold, hunger, wild beasts, and enemies who wait to kil him. There is little or no development nless there is a strong stimulus to acivity. As seen as a nation gets advanced ough to use alcohol the fight with it beins, and nations with really good stuff in em thrive on the combat. So they thrive on wars; but war is costly remedy for sluggishness, and after nations have reached a forward state of adrancement the necessity for providing hem with the stimulus of battles grows s. So presently is should require less eople, Dr. Keely thinks that is as unnecssary as to perscribe an occasional duel he will that a general prescription of an unce and a half a day would make drunk-

There is solace too as well as edification, to be derived from what Dr. Keeley says:

But one perplexity at least is aggravated by Dr. Keeley's suggestions. He seems to hold that the descendants of intemperate persons are better fortified against rum an the offshoots of a sober ancestry. What, then, is a young man's duty towards his possible grandchildren? If he abstains, might be further elucidated, and in particular that it might be accrtained whether the copper-fastened descendants of inebriates ports a recent visitor. e as good at other things as at absorbing rum. To wreck one's viscera and blight one's premise for the sake of grandchildren whom liquor could not hurt might be like running a good ship ashore for convenience in landing its rats. The most prudent way, no doubt, would be to wait until one's decendants are actually in sight, and then if ever, to be reckless. But then it would be too late for them to inherit any benefits. There, are he admits, moderate drinkers, and even moderate drinkers who drink habitually; and there is a method in making them. For by the operation of the laws of natural selection the descendant of generations of inebriates may come to have inbred in his system such a tolerance of alcholic poison as to be able to drink alcohol moderately without getting drunk and without acquiring a craving. Thus after many years of the general consumption of alcohol every nation can furnish a class who can drink alcohol moderately, and perhaps even continuously, without much personal inconvenience.
