LEGAL NEWS.

The Court room was crowded Thursday afternoon to hear the case of the Commonwealth vs. Mrs. Smilley Smith of Butler, who was indicted for selling liquor without license and tor keeping a bawdy house, at the corner of East Jefferson and Elm Sts. where Mrs. Smith keeps a small cigar and grocery store.

Quite a number of men were called as witnesses and they all denied visiting the house for improper purposes, excepting two who refused to answer the question as to whether or no they had sexual connection with Mrs. Smith on the ground that it would criminate themselves, and one of the men said he had purchased two bottless of beer from her. The ladies, also, who were called as witnesses, only visited the house for ordinary social and business purposes, and the jury acquitted Mrs. Smith of the charges against her and put the costs on the county.
