the desire to get something for nothing. Mathematics prove that this cannot be done. We may multiply nothing by any number we please and it will be nothing Common sense should teach us that it is impossible to get something for no-If it did so lotteries would cease to exist; fakirs would have to go to work; gambling uses would be closed; and the fishing "suckers" through the newspapers with their "something for nothing" as bait would have to be discontinued for the want of "suckers" to pay expenses. The fact that all these things, and many more of the same kind exist proves that the fools are not all dead and that there is enough people trying to get something for nothing. As long as men can be found to invest money in mythical western lots, men will sell them. As long as men and women try to get free washing machines, free portraits, free books, free watches, , just so long will these things exist and continue their business of offering something for nothing" and giving "nothing for something." The surest and cheapest way is to buy of those who charge "something for something.—Ex.
