Passage of the Senate Tariff Bill.

Passage of the Senato Family The conference seemed on Thursday to get no nearer together. Instead of har-mony, chaos reigned again in the tariff conference. This was caused by the President. Finding the Senate pliant, he thought it well to push it harder for both free coal and iron ore. When the Senate conferees heard this new demand, their backs stiffened and they refused it indig-natly. The senatorial conferees reported to the Democratic steering committee and a consultation was held. In Friday a great senasion was caused to the Democratic sciencing committee factors a consultation was held. On Friday a great sensation was caused by the action of Wilson in virtually steal-ing the bill from a secretary. The House conferees were willing to accept the Sen-ate measure, but after refasing it in the House session could not under parliamen-tary rules do so. The House conferees were panic-strick-en. It was determined that only the Senate bill could pass, as the Louisiana-Populist agreement proved efforts should be made to arrange for its passage. Speaker Crisp was consulted and the crisis explained. Orisp saw it was time to yield and so said: "We will pass the Senate bill."

and so said: "We will pass the Senate bill." Then came the question as to how to get it. Questions of consistency, of per-fidy, of party diskonor and of humilia-tion were forgotten. As the bill was in cenference it could not come to the House by any known parliamentary procedure unless the Senate consented. The House on having possession of it, could not pass it. Chairman Wilson solved the difficulty by taking the bill from the conference clerk and putting it in his side pocket. That was almost larceny. Having the bill, Chairman Wilson felt himself master of the situation, and so he was. The House on Monday passed the bill as it came from the Senate with its d33 amendments. The humiliation of Cleve-land, Wilson and the other high moral tariff reformers is complete. Wilson didn't want this bill; Grover land, Wilson and the other high motal tariff reformers is complete. Wilson didn't want this bill; Grover Cleveland held it in contempt; the House was opposed to it; the Senate was asham-ed of its offspring and Democrats and Re-publicans alike held the mongrel measure in abomination, but a tariff bill had to be passed and this miserable production was the best the master minds of Democracy cond evolve.

could evolve. The scenes in the caucus and in the Honse subsequently were of the most ex-citing character, and would be interesting to describe at length were there not mat-ters of vaster importance. In the caucus the House committee on conference. Speaker Crisp and the few other gentle-men who have been ruling all the per-formances of the House with a rod of iron carried things their own way with great vociferation and applause, but the pro-tests of Cockran, Johnson, Pence and others were very eloquent and pointed, and showed in the most unmerciful manner the inconsistent conduct of the House, the insincerity of the resolutions and the humiliation to which nearly every Demo-erat of the body was being subjected. The vote on the measure was 182 to 105, and not a single change was made in the Sen-ate. The scenes in the caucus and in the

ate. The scenes incident to the passing of the bill were dramatic. When Mr. Wilson had finished and had several times been slightly applaud-ed by the saddened Democracy, Mr. Reed came to the fore again, attacking the De-mocrats with his heaviest artillery. Those who had heard Reed speak before had said he could not surpase himself, but as the best." His reference to the House conferees as "the little babes in the woods whom it would be found had been left there by their uncle in the White House' was Indicrous. In the most forceful man-ner and in the midst of an awesome si-lence Mr. Reed prophesied the defeat of the Democracy. If was an eloquent at-tack, as was the reference to the conntry disheartened and prostrate under Demo-cratic rule, and the picture of the bright-uning future when the Democrats had been destroyed. It was a dramatie scene when Mr. Bed vielded the Bourke Cockran, who is The scenes incident to the passing of
