LEGAL NEWS.

NOTES.

Judge Ewing, of Uniontown, Fayette Co. Judge Ewing of Uniontown, Fayette Co.
this State, created quite a sensation in hi court the other day by stating that under the Brooks law a saloon keeper or hoteproprietor has no right to take a drink of liquor. This has led the members of his Bar to study the Brooks law very closely.

A curious case was on trial this week i Pittsburg. Some years ago the Chemical Company, of Natrona, began smelting certain ores brought to the works, and certain ores brought to the worse, and extracting metals, copper, gold, etc., from them. This process generated deadly gases, which, escaping by the flues and stacks, killed all the trees, shrubs and grass in the neighberhood; and the farmers are suing the company for damages.

In the case of the Philadelphia Company vs the borough of Freeport, the State Su-preme Court, decided that the company has no right to lay its pipes through the

The United States Supreme Cour The United States Supreme Court knocked some holes in the Income Tax law. A majority of the Court decided that incomes from rents and national, state and county bonds, are exempt, and the balance of the law will stand. One of the Judges is sick, and the other eight are equally divided.

Kizzia Allen has brought suit agains Clarence Dindinger, of Zelienople, for damages for the use of an alleged illegal flue, and figures the damages at $2410. Letters of administration were granted to Laura A. Richardson on estate of Chris-topher A. Maiers; also to M. A. McCand-less on estate of Elizabeth Chambers, of Venango twp.
