NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES A Westmoreland Co. farmer was released from the Western Penitentary last week under remarkable circumstances. Some years before he discovered that his wife was engaged in an intrigue with another man; he accused her of it and they lived unhappy; and she, to get rid of him, forced their two daughters to accuse their father of an unnatural crime. He was "TO BE convicted and sent to the penitentiary; but the doubt as to his guilt led his rel atives to engage the services of a detective who, FIRST after working at the case for nearly two years, got the oldest girl away from her IN mother and secured a complete confession

Westmorland county was represented at the mass meeting in Greensburg, Thursday, called to protest against the creation f Monongahela county. There were about 500 men present. The presiden first made a vigorous speech against the Culbertson bill. He was followed by protests from Paul H. Gaither, D. S. Atkin on. James S. Moorhead, John F. Went ing, James McClure, Henry Shoemaker, Thompson McClain, Amos Front, Joh Betty and E. F. Houseman. Mr. Gaither, in his speech, severely arraigned the bill. claiming that the creation of the new county would be unconstitutional. Res plutions were adopted and will be taken

Bucks county's proposed skunk farm which will be established near Chalfont s rapidly nearing completion, and con siderable curosity is manifested in the unique enterprise by the farmers in the ncinity. The proprietors are nearly ready o stock their farm, and it is said that some of the neighbors are already invest ing in large quantities of toilet water, and South even hose protectors. Some of the prop rty owners near by seem to think th the new enterprise will depreciate the val ie of their properties, but this remains e proven. This will be the first skun farm established in Pennsylvania. At Scottdale last Thursday an Italian

Gov. McKinley of Ohio, returned to Columbus, last Saturday, after a visit t scticut and Rhode Island, where he ems to be very popular. His recaption at Hartford, was accepted at Washington, as plainly showing two things-that the McKinley presidential boom bas a distinc status in New England and that the field is to be diligently cultivated. The Buckeye favorite was bailed at the banquet table as the next president of the United States, and the sentiment, according to the reports, was greeted with loud and prolonged applause. The response was in a governor's best style and the principle of protection dwelt upon with character stic earnestness. It was a McKinley night of remarkable hilariousness and encouragement. A visit to Massachusetts was to have followed, but this was cancelled on not as yet entirely recovered form the grip, not as yet entirely recovered form the grip, and returned home for a rest.
