Mr. Edward Atkinson discusses a very the doings of the multi-murd erer Holmes absorbing question, "Who demonetized the cow?", It was unquestionably owing Anything connected with that arch fiend no matter how wildly copjectural, is con to that early demonetization, the dire effects of which ran down through the censidered good news matter; and wholesom reading is set aside for this gruesor turies and colminated in 1873. that most trash. All this is demoralizing. It may of our financial ills are chargeable, and however; be turned into a useful lesson a not to the much-denounced act of some twenty-two years ago. Mr. Atkinson says that "a cow was the unit of value in the Homeric period. A cow was current money throughout Europe, Asia, Egypt and all Africa. The ox was the highest unit, the cow was the common standard: the ass, the goat, and the sheep were the small change," After this uncovering of an ancient financial secret, Mr. Atkinson with convincing congency and a sort o the question, "Who demonetized the tion which may be realized in the near forward with the farmers earth to a per hour or greater, is a flight of imagina-cow?" M1. Atkinson is clear in the op-inion that what the farmers earth to a per four earth to a combination officipitiful, tearful accert, again propounds cowt" Mr. Atkinson is clear in the op-inion that what the farmers ought to do is to go back "to the real money of our dad-dies, to the motey of the ancient Greaks and Romans, to the unit of value of the men who orginized society and art and in-dustry and commerce." They knew what good motey was, and the question there fore recurs, "Who demonstized the cow?" Mr. Atkinson states that "all the farmers have to is to copy the legal methods that the silver men propose. Put all the cows on Uncle Sam is go legal.

Put all the cows on Uncie Sam at a fixed price, and then let Uncle Sam issne legal-tende r cow certificates." Which can withstand the shock of the rail contact when going at such lightning-like velocity. George Westinghouse, said "We have entered into working arrangement with the Baldwin people under which we pro-duded that that is enough for a year at least, and proposed to suspend work at their distilleries for a twelve-month, pro-vided they can get 90 per cent, of their number to enter into the agreement.
