The Twofold Assault.

[Communicated.] The unanimity of the American people in all matters pertaining to our public education, unhappity, is now disturbed by two grave controversies A strenuous demand is made, in the name of justice and fair play, that parochial or sectarian schools be supported out of the public treasury. An equally strenuous, and thus far more snecessful, assault has been made against the reading of the Bible in the schools and gainst all religious ideas or exercises the school room against all religious ideas or exercises in the school room. The great cities of the west and north west and some whole states like Wisconsin have placed their whole work of education upon a purely and avowedly secular basis. For the citizens of Pennsylvania this whole question has been lifted into new and unexpected importance by a suit now and unexpected importance by a suit now pending in the Courts Lackawanua county to restrain, by injunction, the reading of the Bible and all religious exersises in the schools of the borough of Waverly. What-ever be the decision in the County Courts. the case will go by appeal to the Supreme Court of the State, and the decision there will determine the attitude of Pennsylva nia toward the christian elements in her nia toward the christian elements in her public education.

A committee was formed some time ago under the auspices of the National Reform Association, with headquarters in Philadelphia, for the defense of the public schools. This committee is seeking to bring the whole question, in its present aspect, before the people of the whole state. A public meeting will be held in the United Presbyterian Church on Friday eyening, Oct 25, at which Rev. T. P Stevenson, D. D., of Philadelphia, Corresponding Secretary of the Committee, will address the citizens of Butler.

All who are concerned that our public schools be maintained against sectarian encroachments on the one hand and atheistic or secular assaults upon the other, are tic or secular assaults upon the other, are cordially invited to be present.
