Asafetida.
This is a bad-smelling substance, consisting of a milky, opaque, fetid juice from the root of Fenula fetida. From the root stock, which in full-grown plants is sometimes six inches in diameter and from a foot long, grow numerous spreading triparted leaves of a leathery appearance and light green color. Out of their midst rises a stem of a luxuriant, herbaceous nature, sometimes as high as ten feet, carrying at the top a number of branched compound umbels of the natural odor of the plant—Umbelliferae. Although the odor is so offensive to us, we are told that the people of Bokhara use the small plant as a green vegetable as we do lettuce and relish it. The root stock, which always protrudes several inches out of the ground, is freed from small rootlets and leaves in the month of June, selecting the plants that have not yet borne flowers, and a slice of it is cut off. The wound is then covered loosely with twigs and leaves, to exclude the sunlight and to keep the soil moist. It is left which retards the process; and it is left a thick reddish or brownish gummy substance is found on the exposed part. This exudation, a hardened apparatus of a vegetable wound, is removed, put into leather bags and taken to Herat, the commercial center of Afghanistan. It is sold on good authority, that hardly any asafetida leaves that city in a pure state, a red clay being used as an adulterant, which the pharmacists of Europe and America have to filter out when making the tincture. From Herat the asafetida goes to India, and thence brought by the markets of the world.

The rose of Kashmir grows in the same ground with the Fenula fetida they drink the same dew, feed on the same soil, and the same goiden sun ripens their fruits. But while the one fills the air with fragrance and enchants the eye, the other, like an evil spirit, destroys our rapture, and calls a chilly halt to our enchantment. Thus the good and the bad live close together, not only among the plants, but also among men; and this close proximity of contrasts directs the differing thoughts of the thinker.

THE CITIZEN.
A Peculiar Case.
The Erie Times of last week says: "A peculiar point of law came up to-day in civil court in the case of A. F. Thomas, who sued the Nickel Plate railroad for $5,000 for the burning of some timber on land adjoining the railroad in East Springfield, and no one in the court room can ever remember a similar case. Tuesday when the jury was drawn among the names submitted was that of Greerick Ahl, of Springfield, who was challenged by Mr. S. A. Thompson for good cause, and the name of L. Geringer taken instead. Ahl, however, did not leave the box, and when the names were called he still sat with the jury, while Geringer left with those who were excused. No one at the time noticed the mistake, and the jury brought in a verdict of damages to the extent of $2,000 for the plaintiff, when on appeal the jury it was found that Geringer was missing and in his place sat the challenged Ahl. This put a complicated phase on the case, and no one knows just what will be done in the matter. A prominent attorney, in speaking of the case, said that it was not for the fact that Mr. Davenport challenged Ahl, the judgement would likely stand good, but this challenge might tend to make it eligible for a new trial. Judge Gunnison said that it was before him and he could not tell what would be done about it. In all probability he said a motion for a new trial would be made by Mr. Walling for the plaintiff. With regard to placing the blame he said that the right man was not serving, as neither the attorneys nor the clerk could be held responsible for not knowing the jurymen."

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY
take it morning, noon and night, and it will cure you. I took the medicine as directed, but had no confidence in a cure, which had been tried by so many. After using it a week I began to feel better, and in a short while after that I was cured. I had been suffering with indigestion, everything I ate, breaking up sour in my throat had all gone and I have not had a moment's discomfort since. Truly there isn't a healthier man and my appetite is grand.
