On Friday of last week, an oil well in the Mannington district, which has just been drilled into the oil producing rock, took fire from an explosion of gas, eighteen man were burned, two of whom fatally, three dangerously, and three slightly.
One of those fatally burned was Samuel Anchors of Northaniel Anchors of Hovey twp, whose remains were brought home and interred in Allepheny cemetery last Monday. His remains were followed to the tomb by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. He was about 21 years of age, and was cut down at the very threshold of a useful life by a most horrible and excrutiating death.
