This ought to be a good fruit year.
The bloom for small fruits is immense.
Now is the tailor's and milliner's harvest.

PERSONAL.

L. L. Allison, of W. S. Sinker, has completed his medical course at Indianapolis, and has returned home.

A Treat to Old Fellows.

Thursday April 23 being the 47th anniversary of the founding of the Odd Fellows Lodge 1039 I. O. O. F. the regular meeting of the lodge was held at the home of the lodge.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

If the new Carnegie R. R. is built through this town on the line of the last survey, it will have a station near the town square, cross the West Penn track on a trestle, cross the West Penn track on a trestle, strike land near the old Opera House site, cross McKean at its junction with Centre, knock a corner off I. J. McCandless' C. House across the creek above the milldam on a high trestle, cut a tunnel through the hill, and go on down the creek. Then, according to an account we see in one of the Pittsburgh papers, it will go up Thorn creek, cut across to the head waters of Glacie Run, and then across the summit to the headwaters of Deer creek, and down to the river. This would be a sort of letter S route through the southern part of this county.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

At New Castle, Tuesday, a young man named Shortman plead guilty to chicken stealing and was sentenced three years to the penitentiary. Shortman is one of the most remarkable chicken thieves on record. During the past winter he contracted with grocery men to furnish chickens. They supposed he was a basketer, and were surprised to learn that all of the chickens were stolen. Shortman's mode of operating was to hire a lively rig and drive into the country, where he would steal all the chickens in sight. When arrested at 3 o'clock one morning he had 26 chickens in bags.
