the building association habit acquires something that he is never able to shake off, even if he wants to, and something that is always to him a friend in need. Here is a new building association story that is simply an object lesson for those who are struggling along with nothing to look for-ward to. There resides in this town a man struggling along with nothing to look forward to. There resides in this town a man who for years managed to get along without saying a cent, and he was often worried about the hereafter when he shoul have reached that age when he was no longer able to work and earn as much as he did in the present. He talked the matter over with his wife. and both agreed that something ought to be done in the way of saving if only enough to bury them and save them from a pauper's grave. One day the man saw the advertisement of a new building and loan association about to start, and he wondered if here was not his chance to do some saving. He broached the subject to his wife, and she agreed with him that the time had arrived for them to make a start. They bought two shares in a building association, paying fifty cents per week, and at the end of the year they found that they had not suffered year they found that they had not suffered any from the expenditure of the money and had a little sum laid up in safe hands.

They had had all they wanted on which to the postoffice.

It was a revelation to them, the more they thought it over the for ladies and children.—14th, 15th more it impressed them. It was such a good thing, said the man to a friend, that wife and I talked it over again and we decided to take three more shares, which Flower and Vegetable Plants we bought in due time, and at the end of the year we took account of stock once more. It was the first money of any ac life, and we were both surprised at how easy it had been saved. As in the first and also at the Boos and Reiber year, we had a good living, had not deprived ourselves of anything that we needed. and we had not missed the money we paid out. Talking it over we decided to take another three shares and we did, and we delivered. have not suffered any inconvenience from the outlay. The cut in prices is represented by the shears. The method of our business represented by the square and the ability to please is represented by the tape line. It makes a fine combination, for we are offering spring suits.

Don't Hang Up Your Old Clothes for the summer until you have made arrange-ments for a spring suit. We are offering such a fine line of goods and giving our such a nine fine of goods and giving our people such an opportunity to get bargains that it is toolish to delay. There never was a time when such a fine assortment of first class goods could be seen at our store this season. We are offering suits at prices unheard of before.

Hanging out for the benefit of those who are after bargains. There is no doubt that we are offering better inducements toda; than ever before and we hope all our patrons will take the advantage of the opportunity we are giving them of buying first class clothing at a figure which will please them doubly—first with the clothes, and second with the prices and fit.
