New Castle was the scene of a terrible explosion last Saturday.

The big Rosena furnace owned by Mark Hanna and ex-Senator Cameron, had been acting in a manner that led the manager, Ed Reis, to believe that something was wrong. Reis was called from his bed early in the morning and was with the men who had gone to the casting house to see them make a cast. They had been there but a moment when the furnace let go, and the next instant a heavy volume of coke, iron ore and coal came crashing through the roof of the casting house, burying in the neighborhood of thirty men under the debris.

Came to the premises of George Minkin in Winfield twp. near Carbon Black, on Friday, May 7, 1897, three blickers,—one black, polled; one light gray, with horns and star in face, and the other red, horned, and with white saddle and white belly.

The owner is requested to come for ward, prove property, pay charges and take them away; otherwise they will be disposed of according to law.

The coke and other matter was flying The coke and other matter was flying through the air for several hundred feet and clouds of dust arose. As soon as possible order was restored, and the work of rescue began. Manager Reis was taken out with the skin hanging in shreds from his hands and arms and his legs were terribly burned and bruised. He could not walk, and suffered the most intense pain. He was taken home in an ambulance and will likely recover.

Those who saw the ruins of the casting house and the large quantity of ore, coke and coal that was emitted from the top. considered it marvelous that several men were not killed outright. The top of the furnace was badly damaged. The iron cage which was built for just such accidents, and which has heretofore prevented them, was almost blown to pieces. The loss of the furnace is estimated at something like $7,000, and it will be several days before the damages can be repaired. About a dozen doctors were called to the furnace during the excitement and the city ambulances were kept busy hauling the injured to their homes and to the hospital.
