The managers are good men and citizens who do not care to make money out of the Fair, but have a pride in their county and its progress, and have been endeavoring to make the Fair strictly an educational institution—and to this end have always endeavored to have the best quality of exhibits and have paid liberally for them so that what the people see at the Butler Fair can be relied upon as the best in the land. This has cost the management so much that it has not been able to declare a dividend to its stockholders for more than ten years; the officers who do the than ten years; the officers who do the bulk of the work, receive less than common wages for their work and risk. Three years ago was the dry and dusty year which increased the expenses and prevented people coming and the association lost over $2000 that year, yet paid all the premiums in full. In addition they try to keep off the grounds all kinds of gambling and immoral shows, so that at Butler's Fair everyone can rest assured of an enjoyable time and of meeting their old friends and having a sociable time on a beautiful ground, where good order and amusement always preyail. than ten years; the officers who do the
