An exchange says that a new pota to-digging machine has a steel-pointed scoop to raise the potatoes and earth into a slotted clevator, over which a cylinder brush is revolving to separate the potatoes from the dirt, after which the tubers are carried to a screen, which allows the small potatoes to fall into one box and carries the large ones into another box. With all the cry against machinery, here is one device which every farmer boy will bail with delight. If there is one thing mean to do it is breaking your back picking by hand a four to twenty-acre potato patch. The next invention will be a stone picker, and then the country lad will be happy as a November cricket behind the as a November cricket behind the W H Wallace to F M Wallace, lot in

A catchpenny feature at a recent fair was a merry-go-round evolved from various simple elements. A corner of the room was curtained off with awning cloth, a music-box was borrowed for the occasion and set to playing, and an obliging young woman whose name was Mary strolled slowly around the little table on which the instrument was placed. The promoters of this little deception relied for their continued profit on that trait of human nature that dislikes to confess itself fooled, or having been duped, is pleased to see others travelling the same way. The very substantial sum taken in at the Mary-go-round, the entrance fee to which was put at the low price of five cents, proved that human nature lived up to its traditions.

E. McIntire, agent. senator, and, who, is his endeavors to appease all the different factions and secure their support gets himself into all sorts of ridiculous entanglements from which he happily extricates himself. He receives delegations of the "cold waters," the liquor dealers, the sports, the woman's righter, and attempts to secure the assistance of each and all to attain his ambitions. The woman's righters are represented by a high minded and up-to-date lady who rides a bicycle, dresses in the most advanced fashion, and is besides a wealthy widow. The cold waters and liquor dealers are represented by two crafty politicians, who proceed to "bleed" the alderman according to the most improved practical political methods.

The fun is fast and furious and several novel up-to date specialties are introduced. The play abounds in witty lines, ridiculous situations, and is brimful of bright catchy music.
