WASHINGTON.

The action of Collector Fruit, of Pittsburg, in demanding the resignation of two employes in his office, Martin F. Howley, bond clerk, and George K. Bochert, deputy collector, has received the sanction of the Treasury department and the clerks will be removed. This statement was made by a high official of the department. Although a civil service inspector has been detailed to investigate the alleged violation of the law by collector Fruit the charges filed by Mr. Fruit in the case of the two clerks of insubordination was thought sufficent for their removal. A very pleasant informal affair in the shape of a family reunion was held Saturday, Sept. 11, 1897, at the old Montgomery homestead, in Clinton twp., now the residence of Mrs. J. A. Sefton.

The house was tastefully decorated with coldenrod and form, while four shals to remove their deputies will be far reaching, it is understood, and will hold that the collectors and marshals have the right to remove any of the employes under them, no matter how small an office they may hold.

They live in nice houses, some of them quite aristocratic for these parts. They are not vicious as the ordinary run of Indians. Duncan brought them up strictly for himself. As an example of the manner of teaching they have received and their appreciation of right and wrong, Duncan was selling tobacco in his store and the townspeople remonstrated and told him he must stop it, that it wasn't right. So at the present time no tobacco is sold in the town, and liquor has never been sold here. Duncan will not permit dancing. So you can get a pretty good idea of the peacefullness of the place. Every day is as quiet as Sunday, except for some building and the cannery, when it's running.

It is no trouble to sleep that way now as sweetly as I ever did on feathers. I am so angular I only touch at three points. I have found rowing pretty hard. Every body here owns a boat, and rowing is something they don't get tired of here.

People are crazy to leave the east as they do and go to that 'pestiferous' country with no knowledge of the country beyond that reported in the papers and gotten from maps. The excitement is so recent that nothing has been learned of the country by the majority of the people. It has not been reported in the eastern papers in a true light. The rich finds are exaggerated very much, although there have been a good many fortunate ones. But the losers and disappointed people are not advertised.
