ecifically include himself. Perhaps he has some money laid by. But, brother, if you too have a mortgage, is th nce not on the other man' farm? "Honest Injun," are you not a money lender? You have a large heart for all farmers, this time including ourself. But how about your rightus indignation against the money lender, and your sympathy for those who ave succumbed in the struggle for extence, and are not on Uncle Sam's

Why such appeal to the farmers a gainst the town? Why, in certain arters, persist in assuming that the intry as contrasted with the town is verburdened with an undue propor ion of taxation. The point has bobbed ip before during this discussion, and has been answered. "Citizen" wants o know if the capitalists of the town of Butler pay in proportion to their capital as the farmer or any other good citizen or taxpayer? Certainly, and nore. Butler, with one-sixth the population of the county, pays one-fifth the tax, don't it? The statement has not been refuted. Why draw this line gainst the town? Its prosperity, the productive hum of its varied enterprises set in motion and sustained by the cash of its capitalists, furnishes a hon narket for the produce of the farmers and employment to many of their sons. And in turn the town needs the cour try, it's patronage and co-operation. In the very nature of things, with he good farming lands general occupied, the tendency of population is to he towns. A large number of the nev mers bring their labor as only stock n trade. Even broken down farmers, with scant means, drift thither. So do the shiftless of the county; likewise hat class that tends toward vice. Criminality is the trend of pauperism in town or country. This may prove a ancer on the body politic, a menance ven to quiet retreats in the country We are living in a period of unrest; and usiness depression and want are profic of danger. In the study of the oblem it has been found that wisdom the better part of valor and an ounce f prevention, as in conflagration and ntagion, is worth a pound of cure In this matter of caring for the help ss and shiftless moving hither and thither, town and country must go hand of uncertainties if in hand. The county forms the proper aling with a sociological problem the s becoming dangerously vital to the public at large. There is such a thing s taking too superficial a view of th nestion; of being nearsightedly penny rise and grossly pound-foolish; of holdng to mills and jeopardizing dollars tizens of Butler county, look deeper purpose, viz.; to relieve motherhood of ook further! There is more at stake ere than the poor tax shekel. In adition the phase of Christian humanity onsider the public weal. There is no portion of the commun ty, in its families, barns and out-lying sions, less police-guarded, more penly exposed than the farmer. Th nore prevalent the spirit of Christian ty, the state of general content and one of public morals, the safer is he Now as a rule there is also no class o the community more provident and less burdened with the care of the needy than the agricultural. Look at the record. We find some seventeen ownships in the rural districts of th ounty requiring no poor tax. The re comparatively free from the flu nations of trade and that peculiar floating population that gathers n moss. The community is respectable settled and steady. Yet may and will appenings occur from within or with ut that call for the sheriff, an asylun or jail. We at times read of the most inexpected portions of a community startled by some deed of horror perpe trated by the brood from a hot-bed o crime in another locality, whose town or township does not safeguard others And though the nest be destroyed i one township it will surely build i nother. You want co-operative con trol in this matter, an efficient uniform vstem that reaches all over the county In voting for a poor house we constitut the county a uniform poor district with our county commissioners as a cen tral board of supervisors over it. Un ler this board a steward and matro ould be in charge at the poor farm The machinery to run it is to all very simple. The outcome of all-its effi cient and economy, all this depends, as first and last resort on you, fellow itizens and voters of Butler county tho have it in hand to select your own en to direct it. The county comm ners, with scarcely an exception, ar om the townships. Farmers of Oak ond township, farmers of Butle county, can you not find honest me mong you worthy of your trust place over this thing? Take it in han and manage it. And, dear brothe from Oakland township, let us not say anything more about the money lender
