A CLEAR, VIRILE DECISION.

Had the decision of the Suprer Court upon the conspiracy cases of Quay, Haywood et al been other than that yesterday rendered, the effect upon the public mind of Pennsylvania and the country at large would be very deplorable. Chief Justice Sterrett, in a clear vivile conjunt prayles away the plorable. Coner Justice Sterrett, in a clear, virile opinion, brushes away the last vestige of the plea that among 12 learned judges of the Conrts of Philadelphia these defendants could not obtain a fair trial. Were there any active animosity against Senator Quay in the hearts of these judges, he would still have his capable counsel to note the slightest divergence on their part from

The esteem in which he was held arose from his industry, integrity and good traits as one of our citizens. Coming from Germany to Butler when a young man, in 1854 he soon gained the confidence of all our people and was very successful in his business, that of a painter and whether the Court had continued to the confidence of the confide cessful in his business, that of a painter and plasterer. Shortly before his death he was seized with what is commonly called the grip and being of rather feeble constitution it carried him off, much to the regret of all who knew him. Mr. Wagner was in his 69th year. He leaves seven child-ren behind, all grown up. His wife died a year or two ago.

DEATH OF FRANCIS CROFT. Francis Croft, was born near Man-chester England March 17, 1813. He came with his parents to America in August 1819. He was a life long mem-ber of the Presbyterian church. He died Jan. 4 1899, thus being 85 years 9 months and 17 days of age. The deceased leaves a wife and five children to survive him. He was mar-ried March 9th 1837, to Miss Nancy A.
