cept a boyant certainty of victory. It will do no harm now to tell the real facts.

"It will be remembered that the battle began at six minutes past 5 o'clock on the morning of May 1; the Commodore (now Rear Admiral) Dewy led the client of American warships into action in his flagship Olympia; that, after a fierce fight, lasting two hours and a half, the attacking fleet retired from the battle iffto the centre of Manila bay, and did not renew the attack until nearly four hours later.

"When we hauled off from the fighting line, at 7:36 o'clock, the situation had become apparently serious for Commodore Dewey. We had been fighting in determined and courageous enemy for more than two hours without having noticeably diminished the volume of his fire. It is true at least three of his fire. It favorable conditions a supply of ammunition could not be obtained in less than a month, the outlook was far from being satisfactory. The commodore knew that the Spaniards had just received an ample supply of ammunition in the transport Mindadao, so that there was no hope of exhausting thier fighting power by an action lasting twice as long. If we should run short of powder and shell, we might become the hunted instead of the hunters.

I do not exaggerate in the least when I say that as we hauled off into the bay, the gloom on the bridge of the Olympia was thicker than a London fog in November. Neither Commodore Dewey nor any of his staff believed that the Spanish ships had been sufficiently injured by our fire to prevent them from renewing the battle quite as furiously as they had previously fought. Indeed, we had all been distinctly disappointed in the results of our fire. Our projectiles seemed to go too high to too low—just as had been the cass with those fired at us by the Spaniards. Several times the commodore had expressed dissatisfaction with the failure of our gruners to hit the enemy. We had been the cass with those fired at us by the Spaniards. At that distance, in a smooth sea, we could judge we had not sensibly crippled the foe. Consequently, Commodore Dewey hauled out into the openbay at the end of the fifth round to take stock of ammunition and devise a propular of attack.

refund the amount paid and no charges will be made for the treatment. The following testimonials are the strongests proof of the medicines power to cure:

A. J. Mer Andless. Mr. A. J. McCandles .. deter, Pa., 1893. Mr. A. J. McCandles.

On the and day of April, 1892 I commenced to use your new cure for one of any hosses the that the heaves very bad, and continued to use the medicine for about forly days and the horse did not show any signs of a return of them. It is now, about a year since I quit giving the function and the horse has never showed any sign of heaves, and I feel satisfied that he is properly cured.
