THE CITIZEN.

Iceberg Goes Ashore.

It is not unusual at the proper season of the year for vessels to sight icebergs while making the transatlantic passage, especially if the vessels happen to be taking a northerly course, but it is seldom that an iceberg grounds so that it can be seen by those on shore. This was recently the case at St. John's, N. F., where an enormous iceberg, 150 feet high and nearly a quarter of a mile long grounded on the south side of the entrance to the harbor, where it was, of course, seen by many thousands of spectators.

Most icebergs are produced from glaciers which move down from elevated heights in the interior of some land in the arctic region. The glaciers move slowly onward into the deep waters of the sea, and from time to time fragments break away, forming icebergs. Occasionally whole masses of ice break off at once, really forming floating islands. Ice islands are also made by the breaking up of the great fields of ice of the arctic region. In the Atlantic ocean most of the icebergs come from Greenland and Iceland, the greatest number being produced on the west side of Greenland. From Labrador the ice is floated with the current past Newfoundland and on to the coast of the great bank, where it is melted by the warm waters of the Gulf Stream, and it disappears. Usually the limit of travel of icebergs is 40 degrees north latitude, but in the North Atlantic ocean they have been found as near as 37 degrees south latitude.

Nothing is more imposing than the sight of one of these immense icebergs, which might send the finest ocean steamship to the bottom in a few moments. The sea melts them unevenly, causing jagged and picturesque peaks to jut into the air, and in northern latitudes, where the icebergs are found, they look like fairy castles. Dr. Kane in his first cruise counted 289 icebergs in sight at one time and most of these were 250 feet high. It is, of course, a well-known fact that about one-eighth or one-tenth of the berg projects above water. This means that the iceberg, containing as it does at its base many pieces of rock carried down by the glacier from some northern country, scores to the bottom of the sea, acting really like a gigantic pile.

Noise Kills Caterpillars.

Up in the Catskill mountains, where the caterpillars fall to the ground by hundreds and continue to do so at each succeeding blast.

She told her story, and the noise-cure was immediately adopted by her neighbors. Horns and drums and cymbals were brought into play. Caterpillars fell to the ground by hundreds and were gathered up and destroyed. The cough still seems most effective, though a well-beaten horse drum does good work.

Although rather late, the caterpillars having almost eaten the foliage from the trees, it is believed that many orchards throughout the land with destruction may yet be saved.

Do You Dream?

The fullest examination into the nature and origin of dreams has been made by M. Moreau, the French alienist. He divides dreams into the dreams of health and the dreams that are the result of a diseased state of mind or body.

With regard to the latter it need only be remarked that persistent dreaming is one of the most invariable symptoms of insanity, and as it is a psychological fact that genius is most allied to madness men of genius must be expected to dream more than ordinary men.

With regard to the dreams of health, there is the question of an imperfect state of consciousness or an imperfect state of sleep, according as we look at it. It is obvious that the mind of the clever man, that is constantly occupied with many schemes and thoughts is more liable to be awake when his body is asleep than that of the dullard, whose mind is often asleep when his body is awake.

Thus the sleep of the playboy has become proverbial on account of its undisturbed nature. In such cases the brain is undoubtedly more liable to dream than the dullard.

Part of a Murder Story.

The rising sun had scarcely kissed the snow-capped hills that surround our peaceful city last Saturday morning when the first rays of light revealed one of the most public thoroughfares. The whirring of a rickshaw on the clear morning air, and a sudden messenger of death crashed through the brain of a man lying, summoning his soul to the judgment bar of God without a moment's warning and with all his sins full blown and "tripped on the trap."

The fact had been known since his deadly mission by a hand that a few hours before clasped his victim's hand in friendship. One now lies in the cold embrace of death, and another lies in the silent city on the hill; the other languishes in the county jail, alone with his conscience and his dead as he awaits the outcome of a trial for murder that has already begun—Lancaster (214) Star.

To aid and stimulate nature. Here are some of our prices:

 Cabinet Rye, can't be beat ..... $3.00 a gal.
 Bear Creek Rye, a very fine whiskey ..... $4.00 a gal.
