

128 South Main Street, Mrs. J. E. Zimmerman.

WASH FABRICS.

We'll offer until all are sold a lot of fine Dimities, Organdies, Lawns and Corded Effects at cents per yard, former price 15c.

New Fall DRESS GOODS NOW ON DISPLAY.

Black Crepons, this fall's newest importations—handmade line we have ever shown—the prices are 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and up to $3.00.

Mrs. J. E. ZIMMERMAN. That the dread house cleaning is over the next and more important work is picking a new carpet.

Now

That the dread house cleaning is over the next and more important work is picking a new carpet to pick a carpet in our well stocked carpet rooms is a pleasure, so say the many who have done so.

$1.00 Axminster Rugs, Neatest thing for the money ever shown in Butler at

BUFFY'S STORE

WOMEN. Won't buy clothing for the purpose of spending money. They desire to get the best possible results for the money expended.

G. F. KECK, 142 North Main Street, Butler, Pa.

PAPE'S, JEWELERS.

Diamonds, Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spectacles etc. We have a large and well selected stock.

ELKO PAINT!

Ready for use is the best paint on the market SENOUR FLOOR PAINT stands second to none, fully guaranteed.

Full Line of WALL PAPER for this fall; prices lower than ever.

Picture and Mirror Framing a Specialty.

Contract Painting & Paper Hanging

Patterson Bros., 236 North Main Street, Butler, Pa.

HAIR SWITCH FREE ON EASY CONDITIONS.

L. C. WICK, Dealer in Rough & Worked Lumber

LIME, HAIR AND PLASTER

REGISTER'S NOTICES

The Register hereby gives notice that the following accounts, administrators, executors and guardians have been filed in the office of the Register of Wills, and will be presented to Court for confirmation and allowance on Saturday, August 26, 1899, at 9 A. M. of said day.

PEOPLE TESTIFY.

Reference That is Surely Worth Looking Up

A Butler Man Who Tells His Friends What Has Done Him Much Good.

We will tell you what will cure the worst kind of a case of backache caused from the kidneys. We will not only tell you, but will refer you to people in all walks of life in the city of Butler who have used Kid-neo-ids with the best results.

Butler Savings Bank

Capital Surplus and Profits $60,000.00 $70,000.00

THE BUTLER COUNTY NATIONAL BANK, Butler Penn.

Capital paid in $100,000.00 Surplus and Profits $130,705.95

Braun's Pharmacy.

Cor. 6th St. and Duquesne Way, Pittsburg, Pa., L. D. Telephone 2542.

Wholesale and Retail Importer and Jobber of Drugs, Chemicals, Perfumes, Soaps, Brushes, Etc.

Physicians' Prescriptions

Wholesale and retail dealer in Lubricating and Illuminating Oils, Capital Cylinder, Dynamo, Water White and Standard Gas, Engine Oils, Gasoline, Benzine, Paraffine Wax and Petroleum.

W. F. Braun, Address all mail orders to WHITE, WALTER & CO., 303 S. Main Street.

SEND ONE DOLLAR OUT AND WE WILL SEND YOU A BICYCLE

We want to dispose of our present stock of '99 models, and in order to do it quickly have cut the prices from $29.95 and $30.00 to $21.95 and $22.00.

WIDOWS' APPRAISEMENTS.

The following widows' appraisements are presented for confirmation to the Court of Butler County, Pa., on Saturday, August 26, 1899, at 9 A. M. of said day.

A COUNTRY CHILD.

She looked at the address, and then turned slowly to the signature. "It is from William," she said quietly.

"From William, whom Miss Caroline had thought dead. She wondered how Miss Jane could speak so calmly with a letter from her old lover in her hand.

"He is dead," said Miss Jane, "but recently—there is a postscript!"

"And left you a fortune," quavered Miss Caroline joyfully.

"But when she had read it aloud the sisters stared at each other with stricken faces from which the color had fled.

"His name child—to love and protect," said Miss Jane very firmly and looked at Miss Caroline with defiant eyes.

"I am doing right," said Miss Caroline as she pressed together in a firm grip the two hands which she had just seen her own hands.

"The master of the workhouse was engaged. If she had come for admission, she must sit in the waiting room till he could see her.

Miss Caroline stumbled after the porter, seeing nothing of the long dark corridor which she had to traverse.

"That will never, never be!" she cried. "Where there's enough for two there's enough for three."

"There's more than enough for two there's certainly enough for three," repeated Miss Jane firmly. And silence fell.

After awhile Miss Jane rose. "I will go into the village to get mail for the girls," she said composedly.

"Miss Caroline lifted her white face. "We must wait, Jane. The landlady is blighted. There will be very little to eat."

Her voice failed; then courage returned. "But that is no reason why I should not gather what there is," she added with trembling cheerfulness.

When Miss Jane, shawled and bonneted, hurried down the path, Miss Caroline was too busy over the lavender bushes to bid her hasty back.

"The postman's lady still stammered by the disappointment. Her thoughts troubled like her limbs. They trotted about the subject. Life had been difficult for her since she had begun to meet the additional expense of the crippled child."

Miss Caroline glanced from the postman to the window. Then she smiled and nodded meaningly. Yes, Miss Jane had been sewing. She would see the postman.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

But Miss Jane was already at the door and Miss Caroline trembled again to see that her composure was disturbed. For all that, Miss Jane took the letter from the postman in silent dignity.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

When they rose, their agitation had calmed. They could look at the letter with steady eyes. It lay on the table unopened, waiting Miss Jane's signature.

"Miss Jane polished her spectacles, and her glance crossed the furniture that had grown old with them. "I was always afraid we might have to sell them," she whispered.

THE FALL WEBWORM.

A Defoliator of Shade and Fruit Trees—Remedies Advised. The fall webworm is a typical American species. It is found from Canada to Georgia and from Montana to Texas.

In the District of Columbia and north to New York city there are two generations annually, as is the case with the tussock moth. It is more northern in its range.

The Country Child. To develop the reason of the country child special attention ought therefore to be given to draw out his powers of observation, and particularly in his early years.

From long use her eyes wandered toward the lavender bushes. Yes, it was true. The blight was spreading.

"I am doing right," said Miss Caroline as she pressed together in a firm grip the two hands which she had just seen her own hands.

"The master of the workhouse was engaged. If she had come for admission, she must sit in the waiting room till he could see her.

Miss Caroline stumbled after the porter, seeing nothing of the long dark corridor which she had to traverse.

"That will never, never be!" she cried. "Where there's enough for two there's enough for three."

"There's more than enough for two there's certainly enough for three," repeated Miss Jane firmly. And silence fell.

After awhile Miss Jane rose. "I will go into the village to get mail for the girls," she said composedly.

"Miss Caroline lifted her white face. "We must wait, Jane. The landlady is blighted. There will be very little to eat."

Her voice failed; then courage returned. "But that is no reason why I should not gather what there is," she added with trembling cheerfulness.

When Miss Jane, shawled and bonneted, hurried down the path, Miss Caroline was too busy over the lavender bushes to bid her hasty back.

"The postman's lady still stammered by the disappointment. Her thoughts troubled like her limbs. They trotted about the subject. Life had been difficult for her since she had begun to meet the additional expense of the crippled child."

Miss Caroline glanced from the postman to the window. Then she smiled and nodded meaningly. Yes, Miss Jane had been sewing. She would see the postman.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

But Miss Jane was already at the door and Miss Caroline trembled again to see that her composure was disturbed. For all that, Miss Jane took the letter from the postman in silent dignity.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

When they rose, their agitation had calmed. They could look at the letter with steady eyes. It lay on the table unopened, waiting Miss Jane's signature.

"Miss Jane polished her spectacles, and her glance crossed the furniture that had grown old with them. "I was always afraid we might have to sell them," she whispered.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

THE FALL WEBWORM.

A Defoliator of Shade and Fruit Trees—Remedies Advised. The fall webworm is a typical American species. It is found from Canada to Georgia and from Montana to Texas.

In the District of Columbia and north to New York city there are two generations annually, as is the case with the tussock moth. It is more northern in its range.

The Country Child. To develop the reason of the country child special attention ought therefore to be given to draw out his powers of observation, and particularly in his early years.

From long use her eyes wandered toward the lavender bushes. Yes, it was true. The blight was spreading.

"I am doing right," said Miss Caroline as she pressed together in a firm grip the two hands which she had just seen her own hands.

"The master of the workhouse was engaged. If she had come for admission, she must sit in the waiting room till he could see her.

Miss Caroline stumbled after the porter, seeing nothing of the long dark corridor which she had to traverse.

"That will never, never be!" she cried. "Where there's enough for two there's enough for three."

"There's more than enough for two there's certainly enough for three," repeated Miss Jane firmly. And silence fell.

After awhile Miss Jane rose. "I will go into the village to get mail for the girls," she said composedly.

"Miss Caroline lifted her white face. "We must wait, Jane. The landlady is blighted. There will be very little to eat."

Her voice failed; then courage returned. "But that is no reason why I should not gather what there is," she added with trembling cheerfulness.

When Miss Jane, shawled and bonneted, hurried down the path, Miss Caroline was too busy over the lavender bushes to bid her hasty back.

"The postman's lady still stammered by the disappointment. Her thoughts troubled like her limbs. They trotted about the subject. Life had been difficult for her since she had begun to meet the additional expense of the crippled child."

Miss Caroline glanced from the postman to the window. Then she smiled and nodded meaningly. Yes, Miss Jane had been sewing. She would see the postman.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

But Miss Jane was already at the door and Miss Caroline trembled again to see that her composure was disturbed. For all that, Miss Jane took the letter from the postman in silent dignity.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

When they rose, their agitation had calmed. They could look at the letter with steady eyes. It lay on the table unopened, waiting Miss Jane's signature.

"Miss Jane polished her spectacles, and her glance crossed the furniture that had grown old with them. "I was always afraid we might have to sell them," she whispered.

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."

"The noise of the latch gave her a shock. She could not believe her eyes. The excited heart thumped. The postman had stopped at the gate. He was the younger sister who ruled the house. Miss Caroline never dreamed of her being in the village of morning till Miss Jane said: "Now, sister, it is daybreak. We must be rising."