to Make Sure That They Were at the Right Place. Wise is the man who, if fate decrees that he shall dwell in a flat, takes pains to master all details by which his own domicile may be distinguished from that of his next door neighbor For if he fails to do so strange things may transpire, as this story will dem-It happened only a few nights age and in Woodlawn, which is a veritable wilderness of flat buildings of all sizes and designs. One of the old fashione structures is particularly confusing. It has an infinity of length, in which there are six entrances, all much alike each giving ingress and egress to the tenants of eight flats.

Two or three weeks ago a family took up its abode in the building, oc-upying the ground floor flat on the east side of the fourth entrance from th east end of the building. That sound
