HIVES FOR WINTER.
A Cheap Chair Arrangement—How to Move Bees.
There is no better arrangement for wintering bees than an ordinary dry goods box made into a chair hive, as shown in Fig. 1, and the manner of placing it is so fully explained in the picture that no further direction is needed. The side of the large box is taken off to show how to arrange the hive of bees. The live is tipped up at one side to show the bottom arrangement. The side is placed back and the chair is between live inside filled with dry chaff, a good roof added and all painted up nicely, as shown in Fig. 2. This arrangement is illustrated in Farm, Field and Poultry, in which A. H. Duff also tells about moving bees. He says that moving them, either long or short distances, should be done before cold weather. They should be located on the spot where they are intended during warm weather to be wintered, so as to be thoroughly acclimated with their surroundings before cold weather sets in. This not only answers for long distances, but more especially so if they are to be moved about in the same year. If colonies are thus changed just at the beginning of winter, when they do not have a chance to make their new location by frequent flights, it will result in increased mortality and a heavy loss in bees. The only safe plan to move colonies in the same year is to move the live a few feet each day that the bees are flying until the desired spot is reached. In this manner the bees will follow the live and find their way home.

People don't buy pianos for looks alone. If they did any one of the pretty piano cases offered for sale with the fine attachment inside, would do very well and not cost much. A few months use serves to show the difference between a good and a bad piano, and a piano carefully made of excellent material and a piano made of pine or any cheap stuff, shaped together anyhow. The Chase Brothers is as good a piano as was ever made. You may see it any time you will come in. "Seeing is Free." They are truly warranted, every respect. You run no risk. Should a piano prove defective you are welcome to come and request another of the same style and we will exchange it with you free of charge at any time. Terms to suit your convenience. You can save you $100 and upwards in the price of a first class piano.
