Wednesday of last week, was buried next day, her body having turned black. Her death is said to have been caused by cating sour-grass upon which there that are very polsonous. She is said to have been a remarkably bright girlspeaking English and German as well as Italian and her terrible death is a warning to children against eating whatever they find in the woods.

Some of the hail or hail-stones that fell in this county, last Friday, were unusually large. At Evans City they were "as large as walnuts," at Millerstown some measured over two inches in omference, and we have heard of both men and horses being caught out in hail storms and being pounded by the stones so hard as to cause them to Hail stones are gennerally supposed to be formed by the rain dropping through a strata of cold air, but the books say they are formed by the rain-drops being caught in a whirlwind and carried up nto the freezing " rata, and someting ceive a coating of snow. Nobody has strata and the snow strata, but everyody knows that the power of gravity surface, and that they can hit hard.

In Pittsburg, last Thursday, Judge M. W. Acheson in the United Status Circuit court gave binding instructions to the jury in the case of J. B. Black, administrator of Newton Black, dee'd, against the Travelers Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., to find for the defendants. The suit was to recover $5,000 on an insurance policy.

Judge Acheson gaid that Black's statement in applying for the policy was misleading. He stated that he had 'never had any fits, disorders of the brain, or mental or other bodily infirmities." In 1864 Black was shot in the head, the wound causing a depression of the skill. A dangerous surgical operation was necessitated and Judge Acheson held thaf the wound was classed under 'bodily infirmities," and that the plaintiff could not recover.
