hours of 2, 5, 7 and 8 P. M. the rain came down in torrents, accompanied by strong wind, lightning and the heaviest thunder of the summer. The dreadfulness of night did not begin to be realized until its murky blackness settled over the town, and the fact that there was no electric lights, and the street cars stood helpless on the tracks showed that the creek was again over its banks, had flooded out the electric light plant and of course was doing untold damage in the lower portions of town.

The wind at 5 o'clock tore many awnings along Main St. to shreds. On N. Main St. the storm had had severity of a cloud-burst. The new sewer through Henry Troutman's property was not sufficient to carry off the deluge of water and Main St. was two feet deep from Pearl to Clay. A Good Caterer. Everybody who comes to the Fair expects to secure something good to eat at a reasonable price, and the Fair Ass'n has provided for that by leasing to Caterer Gill Moser the entire row of restaurants and the boarding house on the Midway. Gill guarantees that there shall be no lack of provisions of good quality, and at a fair price, during the entire three days, and his success in providing for the Merchants, Millerstown and Du Bois picnics last week makes his guarantee "good as the wheat."

That youth forms no barrier to success when there is genuine talent and bility, is shown in the advancement of that remarkable child star. Irene Myers, who appears at the head of her own company at the Park Theatre all next week. The charm of this dainty little artiste lies largely in her convincing sincerity, added to which she has a strongland. ing sincerity, added to which she has a natural and easy stage presence, a graceful figure, an exceedingly sweet, face and an entire freedom from affectation. An absence of that parrot like reading so common among children of the stage, enables her to interpret her parts with intelligence and feeling, indicating that her work is not the result of the rigid coaching the ordinary child is subjected to, but to that of genius, which no amount of training can accomplish. Critics throughout America unanimously pronounce her the most remarkable child ever seen upon this continent, and look upon her in amazement. She will be seen Monday evening as Chucky Connors in The Stowaway and on Tuesday evening as Peaches in The Electrician.
