

EIGHT POUNDS!

Eight pounds of love and laughter, of smiles and sunshine or—? Many a mother can fill up the blank out of her experience of puny, wailing children, whose coming brought no gladness to the home. Women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription know that it makes all the difference between a puny, wailing child and a healthy, happy child. It is the only medicine that gives the whole body the benefit of moderate food, and it is the only medicine that gives the child the benefit of moderate food, and it is the only medicine that gives the child the benefit of moderate food.

SHOWERS OF MANNA.

JUST WHY AND HOW SUCH PHENOMENA ARE POSSIBLE.

This Food of the People of Israel in the Wilderness was a Divine Blessing. It is still found in Parts of Asia and Africa.

"It is manna," exclaimed the people of Israel as they gathered the food which seemed so miraculously to appear at their very feet in answer to their cry for sustenance, and which they ate and were satisfied, and we are told they "wist not what it was."

And during the ages that have passed since its first appearance on that memorable dewy morning in the wilderness of sin men have declared again and again that they "wist not what it was" that thus fed the Israelites in their need, though numberless conjectures have been made and discussions held on the matter.

The chief opinion which had sway for a long time was that manna was the sap of the tamarisk, but now authentic scientific knowledge, declared that manna was without doubt a certain Lichen (Lecanora esculenta).

This is based on the fact that well authenticated rains of manna, have been reported at least six times during the last century by reliable travelers in the east, and the descriptions of the deposit given in precise present day language leave no doubt upon the point.

If a piece of manna be examined under the microscope, its peculiar compound structure can be clearly seen. There is a distinct, and in fact, a shining, fungal threads glistening in the light, while inclosed in their meshes are a number of round, bright green cells, each containing a single nucleus.

The fungus and algae live together in most intimate connection.

It may be asked how fresh manna lichens arise, seeing that it is difficult to imagine a fructiferous meeting of a particular fungus and a particular green plant. But granted the meeting has once taken place, the rapid reproduction of the fungus is to be understood.

At certain times in the year a yellowish dust appears in little green cups growing on the surface of the plant, and each of the grains of dust is a minute bundle containing a few of the white filaments and a few of the green cells wrapped up together, so that wherever this dust may fall each grain can become a new manna lichen.

There is, moreover, a second method of reproduction in which the fungus alone takes part and sends out tiny spores to take their chance in the wide world of finding a suitable host, as their parent has done, but the details are complicated and at present involved in some obscurity.

Thus, then, Lecanora esculenta—manna—is in its very nature one of the most remarkable phenomena in the vegetable world. It is found over great tracts of southwest Asia, near Constantinople, in the Crimea, the deserts of Arabia, in the Sahara and the deserts of Algeria.

It is easy to pass it by unnoticed, for it is grayish yellow in color and grows in gray lines on the rocks and fragments of rock in the form of a wrinkled crust which seems to the casual observer part of the very rock itself, and needs care to distinguish it.

Cut through, it is white like corn within, dry and powdery. It is, moreover, extremely light in weight. It is obvious that there is not much nourishment to be obtained from the surface of the limestone rock, hence all the sustenance of the two plants must be obtained from within the rock, and the rain by the little green plant, which must thus work doubly hard to be able to pass on sufficient food to its partner's living in addition to providing its own.

By degrees, as it grows older, it becomes loosened or even detached from the rocks, and then, when the sudden winds and violent storms which affect many of these regions blow, the featherweight pieces of lichen crust are torn up and blown into the air at the mercy of the wind and carried, it may be, for immense distances.

The rains, too, that descend with such sudden vehemence sweep it away into water channels, where it is borne along on the stream and deposited in hollows and left there in heaps when the water subsides.

At times, too, a waterspout will gather it up, carry it along and ultimately deposit it in a place where hitherto it had been practically unknown—Sunday Magazine.

EQUINE HEADGEAR.

Large Straw Sun Hats the Latest Device For Horses' Comfort.

The idea of placing a wide brimmed straw hat over the horse's head to prevent sunstroke is said to have originated in New York, and it is claimed that straw hats are much better protectors than any of the awning arrangements.

From this primitive start a number of novelties have been evolved and put on the market.

Coarse straw head hats are largely manufactured in a variety of styles, some of which are here shown. This headgear gives a decided appearance of comfort on horses under the scorching summer sun.

THE BEET HARVEST.

Experience in Convenient Methods of Storing Them.

We have tried different methods of storing beets. In a cellar or basement they keep well the first part of the season, and if frostproof this is a good way to keep the roots for early winter feeding, but by far the most satisfactory method we have tried and the one we now always follow is pitting or burying in a trench. We keep the roots in this manner fresh until May or after they are no longer needed by the stock, which can get succulent feed from the pastures.

First we cut trenches or pits. We take the plow and throw up three or four furrows, above the loose earth and plow up the bottom again. We sow the beets in the trench, and the earth, and the trench is ready for the plow.

We top by hand, twisting off rather than cutting with a knife, as a knife causes the roots to bleed. The roots are carefully packed—opportunity should always be given them to dry—laying in the pit instead of throwing them up well. Begin filling in at one end of the pit and cover each day's harvest at night. While the roots should be dry on the surface, they should not be dried otherwise. We have buried with and without straw and prefer using straw. There was no noticeable difference in the quality of the beets when covered so far as the roots were concerned, but there was a difference in their cleanliness for handling. Without straw the earth sifted through the whole pile and made a disagreeable job of handling in winter and spring.

To provide for ventilation and to prevent heating a twisted wisp of straw is laid across the trench through the covering. At first we put on only enough covering to turn the rain and prevent frosting from any chance early cold snap. This is increased as the cold weather advances. We run our pits north and south, as we can then begin taking the roots from the south end and not expose the remaining roots to the frost.

We have our pits open at all times through the winter, but by using plenty of manure to cover the trench we never lose anything by freezing. Of course the pit should be located on high and dry ground, it being well to let it slope in all directions from the pit. We do not consider it much more trouble to get our beets from the pit than from the bin in the cellar, and they certainly keep much better. Write a Kansas correspondent to Country Gentleman.

Asthmalene Brings Instant Relief and Permanent Cure in All Cases.

Sent Absolutely Free on Receipt of Postal.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. P. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Asthmalene relieved my cool condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with painful cough and asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and torturing disease, asthma, and thought you had over-grown your medicine, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full size bottle."

We want to send to every sufferer a trial treatment of Asthmalene, similar to the one that cured Mr. Wells, to any sufferer who will write for it, even LITTLER FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even LITTLER FREE OF CHARGE, to any sufferer who will write for it, even LITTLER FREE OF CHARGE.

Never mind, though you are despairing, however bad your case, Asthmalene will relieve and cure. The worse your case, the more glad we are to send it. Do not delay. Write at once, addressing DR. TAPF BROS., MEDICINE CO., 79 East 19th St., N. Y. City. Sold by all Druggists.
