I had heard him coughing at night in a way to make me wonder if consumption had not taken a firm hold on him, and I couldn't help but notice how thin he was and how little appetite he had. It was one day while we were scouting within a mile of the Spanish lines and were lying in a thicket, with the land were lying in a thicket, with the land crabs nipping at our clothing and the nosquitoes hovering about us in clouds, that he said:

Father of Modern Jurisprudence. Louis IX. was practically the founder of modern jurisprudence. About the year 1241 he noticed the abuses which were caused in France by men taking into their own hands the work of relished a proclamation establishing the quarantine du roi. This forbade private redress for wrongs for the space of forty days after the injury was committed. During that time the injured person must seek redress and satisfaction in the king's court, and if his wrong were not righted at the end of forty days he might then take its rec-tification into his own hands.

This proclamation made justice speedy and tolerably sure, although, of course, its administration was in a rough and ready way, and unless the records are at fault some law of this kind prevailed in Louisiana at the time when Missouri was a part of the French king's possessions.

"The foreigners up in the coal regions," says a writer in the Philadelphia Record, "drink polinsky, and that's why so many stories of horrible erimes come from there. Polinsky is at the bottom of every riot and much murder. It is simply a mixture of beer and bad whisky, usually blended in a washtub and seasoned with spices. At every wedding, christening, wake or other gathering of a social nature there is always a tub of polinsky. In one our all hands will be drunk, in two ours there will be a free fight, and, nours there will be a free light, and, unless the police interfere, in three hours there will be a murder. In the more thickly populated communities the police try to break up these polinsky parties in their inciplent stages, but they don't always succeed."

Some of the late Lord Randolph Churchill's friends once tried to have Lord Salisbury reinstate his erration eutenant. Salisbury listened to them patiently and then asked, "Have any of you ever had a carbuncle on the back of your neck?'

"No," was the reply.
"Well, I have," retorted his lordshlp, "and I don't want another." GREWSOME RELICS.

The five Americans of us were on the left, el-bows touching, and not a man of us however, he had a little way of measuring by the taste of his guest and or-dering accordingly. Colonel John R.
