The Origin of Speech.

The dog can emit four or five different tones, each indicative of a special mental condition and each fully understood by its companions. The barn door fowl is credited with from nine to twelve distinct vocal sounds, each ca-pable of a special interpretation by its fellows. The gestures of the lower animals are either facial, like the grimaces of the monkey, or changes of bodily attitude, like those of a dog. After citing the above mentioned facts the president of the anthropological sec-tion of the British association in a recent address went on to say that he thought it might not unreasonably be inferred that the remote progenitors of man relied upon equally lowly means of communication and that from such bumble beginnings speech has gestures, facial expressions and cer-tain vocal sounds often more eloquent than words.—Youth's Companion.
