

DISTILLED WATER.

It is the Purest and Only Available Water.

Bull a gallon of water until there is but a quart left, and the quart will contain all the impurities of the gallon and be nearly four times as impure as before. Continue the boiling, and all the impurities—animal, vegetable and mineral, except the gases thrown off—will be reduced to one-fourth of their original amount. The water which is evaporated and passed off as steam is very nearly pure. But, you will say, it kills the dangerous germs. We will suppose it does, but these are not the materials for bacterial life to feed upon. Do you relish the idea of eating in food or drinking their dead and decaying remains, which poison the water by their decomposition? The fact is scientific investigation has proved that boiling only kills the feeblest, least injurious germs.

Try a simple experiment. Put unboiled city water in one bottle and the same that has been boiled for half an hour or more in another. Keep in the sun or in a warm place for a week or longer and note the difference. The unboiled water will show a cloudy deposit in a few days, and smell, but that which has been boiled will be so much worse in these respects that no one would think of using it in comparison with one that you can submit a properly sealed bottle of pure distilled water to the same conditions, and at the end of a year it will be found to be as pure, sweet and perfect as when first bottled.

The purest and best of the only absolutely safe water to use for drinking and the preparation of all food and artificial drinks is that produced by distillation, but the most perfect one produces a water far superior in purity and healthfulness to the very best spring waters under the most favorable conditions. The nearest approach to it in purity is rainwater, which is distilled water of nature's production, when collected on clean surfaces, in uninhabited sections, where the air is pure and uncontaminated by smoke, dust, city and factory gases, etc.—Sanitarian.

SOME WRITERS.

Locke is said to have spent six years in the preparation of his essay, "On the Human Understanding."

Lamartine, the great French poet, was happily married and received great aid from his wife in all his undertakings.

The great Dante was married to a notorious sinner, and when he was in exile he had no desire to see her, although she was the mother of his children.

Wolfe is said to have written "The Burial of Sir John Moore" in one evening directly after the battle of Corunna, the defeat of the gallant British officer.

A friend of the late Walter Besant relates that the novelist always kept on his desk before him a list of the characters of the novel he happened to be at work on, their relationship and appearance.

Hans Christian Andersen formed his style by narrating his stories to various groups of children before he wrote them down. His one thought was to become famous, and he was very careful not to make any enemies.

Dickens says in the introduction to "David Copperfield" that he spent two years in the composition of that novel. He did not usually require so long a time, many of his novels being finished in less than a year and most of his shorter stories in a few days.

Animals and Salt.

Among certain people there is a strong idea that nothing is worse for dogs than salt, but as a matter of fact, when administered in small quantities, it materially assists the process of digestion. There is no doubt, however, that to give dogs or any other animals both or too much salt is to give them a disease which is almost equivalent to giving them a small dose of poison. The use of salt among horses, cattle and sheep is advocated by the highest veterinary authorities. Pigs, on the contrary, are extremely susceptible to the poisonous influence of the agent, and experiments have been made which have proved that small doses regularly administered, fatal results. Habitually, as a matter of course, all animals consume a certain portion of salt, as it exists in certain proportions in most articles of food.—London Mail.

Tilden's Dog.

At one of the early dog shows Samuel J. Tilden bought an immense Great Dane dog. "What's his name?" asked a visitor.

"Ask him," said Mr. Tilden.

"What good would that do?"

"It's his name," was the reply.

So it was "Askim."

The dog never uttered a word of trick, but would only perform when fed. "He'd make a good politician," said his owner as he gave him a bone.—New York World.

At the Parting of the Ways.

"Do you take this man to your wedded husband?" asked the justice of the peace.

"I don't know whether to do it or not, sir," said the young woman, wiping her eyes. "He's got the money from me to pay for my license. I don't like to marry a man of that kind, and yet I hate to see $2 wasted."—Chicago Tribune.

Dog's Teeth.

De Style—He pulled fifteen teeth from me.

Gumbasta—He's no dentist.

De Style—I know it, but he pried open the dog's mouth and yanked him off.—New York Telegram.

Her Vanity.

Some years ago a marble sculptor had his place of business on Penn street near Ninth street. A business man lost his wife, and he ordered a tombstone for her grave from the sculptor. It was to be a life size study of her. The figure was finished in due time and placed in the cemetery.

Several years passed, and the figure had not been paid for. The sculptor was a man of business, not given to sentiment, and he took the figure out of the cemetery, placing it on exhibition in a window at his place of business. It naturally attracted a good deal of attention, and one day a woman in passing stopped to look at it. She recognized the figure, but to her astonishment found it was a good deal different from that she was correct.

The woman shook her head and said sadly, "Alas, Mary Jane was always a vain creature, but I never thought she would go this far."—Pittsburgh Press.

When Four States Meet.

It is queer to think of the possibility of being in four states at once, yet there is one spot in the United States—the only place in the world—where it is possible. Look on your map of this country, says the St. Louis Republic, and you will find an intersection between two straight lines, where Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona meet.

The place is not often visited, as it is not readily reached. The stone erected there by the government surveyors is on top of a spur in the Carriazo mountains. The nearest railroad town is Mancos, Colo., nearly 100 miles from the "four corners."

The region about was once densely populated by cliff dwellers, but now there are no human beings within miles.
