A Cat-astrophe.

Some evenings ago while sitting under a large maple tree, we noticed a cat climb a neighboring tree. Some time after there was a fluttering in the tree, and three birds fell; then pussy came down, looked around, saw one bird, sank her teeth into its head, carried it around the corner; and then came back and looked for the others but could not find them.

One bird was not enough, and she went up the tree after more.

CHURCH NOTES.

In the First Presbyterian church, of Passaic N. J., there was great excitement when Rev. W. I. Sweet, of Everett, Mass., in his excitement incident to preaching a stirring sermon, did about a $100 worth of damage by his gestures. He had just started when with a sweep of his hand, he knocked a large and valuable vase containing cut flowers off the pulpit. The congregation tittered.

A few moments later away went the large Bible, which occupied the top of the desk. Next a glass containing ice water was sent flying against the choir loft and smashed, and the congregation moved in their seats, but when a table on which was a cut glass pitcher filled with water, went over into the front ranks of the worshipers it was more than they could stand and a general laugh went up.

A Startling Report.

One that Speaks Volumes-Tells of a Great Good Done-Of : Certain Cure-- For the Nerve

Our enterprising neighbor the Pittsburg Times, on Monday last, had an article from a Prof. Garmett at Washington City, giving the derivation of names of streams and places in Western Pennsylvania, some of which he derives from Indian origin or Indian words. Among these is our own Connoquenessing creek. Its name, he says, comes from an unpronouncable Indian word meaning "For a long ways straight." Now as there is nothing very "straight" about the Connoquenessing we think there is some mistake about this origin of its name. It is in fact a very crooked stream and some of our early settlers, we are told, said the Indian ward meant crooked creek rather than "straight" creek. But the best authority on the question says the Indian word Connoquenessing meant a stream of very green and grassy banks, this would seem probable as the bands of our Connoquenessing have certainly a thick groth of green particularly of willows, that is on no other stream we know of to the extent it is on this.

The writer, we think, is equally in error in giving an Indian derivation to Slipperyrock simply because its bed or bot-Mrs. E. A. Pape of 125 East Jefferson Pills to others as a reliable nerve and I.
