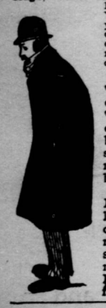
COURTING DANGER

It is courting danger to stand under icy eaves. Not a few have learned this to their cost. Every winter injury and even death are reported as the result of this carelessness. But there is a far more popular way of courting danger. Every man or woman who neglects a cough is inviting sickness, and many a fatal sickness has its beginning in a slight cough.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure the cough. Even when the cough is obstinate and there is hemorrhage with emaciation and weakness, "Golden Medical Discovery" always helps and almost always cures.

"I was troubled with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs and left me with a miserable cough," writes Mr. Joseph D. Burns, of 318 Hucstis Street, Ithaca, New York. "I used two bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' after which my cough disappeared entirely. I cannot recommend your medicine too highly."



Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs. Substitution means a little more profit to the dealer but a loss to you.

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

MELON GROWING.

Items In the Production of the Famous Rocky Ford Melons.

Both watermelons and cantaloupes succeed best in a dry, hot climate, and here at Rocky Ford we have the ideal place to mature each to perfection. The moisture is practically all applied by irrigation, and the season is long enough to give ample time to secure a full crop, and by this I mean to allow from six to eight weeks of ripening season, says a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer in describing the growing of melons. After touching upon planting he says: I use a two row, pivot wheel cultivator with which to do most of the horse cultivating and begin as soon as the melons are planted, not waiting for the plants to come up.

Careful tests have proved that one cultivation a week will develop twice as much available nitrogen as compared with one cultivation in two weeks. Cultivate deep and get farther away from the hills as the vines grow, as the roots grow as fast as the vines. I keep the cultivator going as long as I can get through the field, using a nine tooth cultivator drawn by one horse to finish the work, so that within a few days after the last plowing the vines cover the ground.

The first handwork should be done with a rake three or four days after planting and consists of lightly raking the surface of each hill, taking care not to go deep enough to disturb the seed. This hinders the grass or weeds and enlivens the soil. The first hoeing is done as soon as the plants are well up and should be very thorough. The plants should first be thinned out so that six to eight remain, and leave them about two inches apart. Stir the soil thoroughly around the hill and draw fresh mellow earth up to the bottom leaves of the plants.

The grower must then water lightly, after which the furrows are plowed in and must be made again for each successive watering until the last plowing, when they must be carefully plowed out and left for future waterings. The second hoeing is done when the plants have four to six leaves, and at this time the hills are thinned to two plants, taking care to select the strongest, standing well apart. The hoeing is done the same as before.

Care must be taken not to water too often, as the plant gets into the habit of looking for surface moisture and starts no long taproots, while if forced to go down after the moisture it becomes much more hardy and produces a firmer melon of better quality.

The third and last hoeing is done when the vines average about eighteen inches long and can be easily lifted with the left hand while the soil is stirred about two inches deep and drawn to the roots with a light hoe in the right hand.

Early in the season if bothered by the small striped beetle we dust the plants with fresh slaked lime by putting a small quantity in a loosely woven burlap sack and shaking it over the hills. If bothered later by the melon louse, I saturate the affected hills with kerosene and then spread straw over them and burn all the lice.

The vines must not be pulled, as the lice will drop off on other vines and then continue to spread. In order to be able to destroy these at once when they appear it is quite necessary to look after all of the field at least twice a week.

Fighting the Cucumber Beetle.

The larva of the cucumber beetle is subterranean in habit. It is a slender, wormlike creature, white with a dark head, and it attacks the roots and bores inside the stems of the plants.

Good success in treating it has been obtained by covering the young plants with a square of cheesecloth, kept raised by two flexible sticks crossed at right angles and with the ends stuck in the ground. The cheesecloth is held down easily by putting some earth on the edges. By the time the plants have grown so as to require the removal of the covering, many of the first brood of the beetle will have disappeared. As an insecticide paris green with land plaster (one pound to fifty) dusted over the plants has proved more effective than several others which have been recommended. But when the insects are in very large numbers the plants are gradually eaten up, although large numbers of the beetles are destroyed. Other remedies which have given satisfaction in years when there was not excessive abundance of the beetles are land plaster and ashes impregnated with coal oil or turpentine, scattered in small quantities on each hill. Tobacco dust from cigar factories acts as a repellent to the beetles and also as a fertilizer. Pyrethrum powder is deadly to the beetles, but requires frequent renewal.

Field mice have done considerable damage to small fruit trees in some parts of New York state this spring.

Cemeteries Where Women Gossip.

Friday, the Sabbath of the Moslems, when all true believers of the masculine gender make a point of going to church, their wives, sisters, and daughters resort to the cemeteries and wail for the dead. But all their time is not spent in weeping, and sorrow is not the only emotion they display on these occasions. They take with them bunches and garlands of flowers and decorate the graves of their relatives and pray and weep over the dead for a time. Then, when this pious duty is performed, they gather in little groups and have a good time gossiping about the living.

Thus the day of mourning is very popular among the Moslem women. It gives them almost the only opportunity they have of cultivating the acquaintance of their neighbors, because it is not customary to exchange visits as in our country.—Exchange.

Different Kinds of Feet.

As to national characteristics in feet, it may be said that the French foot is narrow and long. The Spanish foot is small and elegantly curved—thanks to its Moorish blood—corresponding to the Castilian's pride of being "high in the instep." The Arab's foot is proverbial for its high arch. The Koran says that a stream of water can run under the true Arab's foot without touching it. The foot of the Scotch is high and thick, that of the Irish flat and square, the English short and fleshy. When Athens was in her zenith, the Greek foot was the most perfectly formed and exactly proportioned of that of any of the human race. Swedes, Norwegians and Germans have the largest feet, Americans the smallest. Russian toes are "webbed" to the first joint. Tartarian toes are all the same length.

FARM AND GARDEN

WINDPROOF HURDLES.

Plans For Removing One Objection to This Kind of Fencing.

One objection which seems to be made to the more general use of hurdles is the liability of their being blown over. A writer in Country Gentleman submits illustrations of hurdles which, he says, offer less resistance or are better fortified against the effects of the wind:

Fig. 1, while not strictly a movable hurdle, is nevertheless considered as such and is the one in most common use hereabout. I can only give measurements from memory, but should say that they were ten feet long and five feet high when set up. The figure shown is made of sawed stuff, but they are more often made of split saplings. The construction, however, is precisely the same. Holes are made with a bar, and they are set end to end and pinned together at the top. These, like those supported on the A crutch, form a perfectly straight fence, which is not so proof against the force of the wind as one built zigzag or worm fashion.

In Fig. 2 I have shown two panels that are intended to be set up in this manner. The left hand end of panel b slips in the right hand end of panel a, and a section of the fence is shown in Fig. 3. These panels are supposed to be ten feet long and four feet high and the lumber 1 by 5 inch stuff, but these dimensions can be varied to suit the idea of the user. With these dimensions, however, the distance between the end uprights on the panel ought to be eleven inches. On panel a the end uprights ought to be fifteen inches from either end. This ought to make the fence worm about four feet. As can be readily understood, more or less worm will be given to the fence by moving the second upright from either end in panel a.

A Hidden Foe.

Often it will be found upon inspection of the strawberry plant that the main roots have been cut off by a large white grub with a yellowish head. Usually they leave enough small roots to keep the plant alive when the ground is moist, so that it is not likely to be noticed. These pests have never appeared upon the surface, like the cutworm, but do their dastardly work under the ground where it is not seen and at a time when the plants need every root and fiber to insure a good stand of vines for the next season's crop.

A farmer called on me one day and requested me to go with him to see if I could tell what was the matter with his strawberries. I went with him, and one glance at the vines was sufficient for me to understand what was the trouble. Stepping to the side of a plant, I dug around the roots of the plant and pulled out a large white grub. I instructed his twelve-year-old boy, who had accompanied us, how he could locate the grubs by repeating the operation several times, and his father told him he would give him a cent apiece for all the grubs he could find. It cost him over $2. From what vines were left they gathered at the first picking a hundred quarts and sold them for $10.—Cor. Ohio Farmer.

Methods With Radishes.

I have been in the business several seasons. The soil is a great factor and should be a rich, sandy loam, well drained and free from weeds. I have used several kinds of fertilizers with some success, but good stable manure, well rotted, is of most importance. Wood ashes and bone are also highly recommended, and nitrate of soda gives good results if properly applied. I plow in fall and again in spring, working the soil very fine. I drill the seed with a garden drill eight inches apart between the rows and one or two seeds to the inch for turnip rooted varieties, for late or long varieties twelve to sixteen inches between the rows, and thin from two to four inches, according to size. For a succession sow once a week as long as the weather is favorable, which is about July 1 for early varieties. Do not sow such varieties as White China before June 1 or, better still, June 15 and up to Aug. 15 for our latitude, about 43 degrees, says a Canadian correspondent in Orange Judd Farmer.
