-At the railroad crossing of Liberty Ave., Pittsburg, last Wednesday, a seven-hundred ton bridge, carrying two tracks and over which trains were almost constantly passing, was gradually lowered twenty inches. It was a remarkable feat in engineering.

-The Butler men were doomed t disappointment at Bradford, last Friday evening. They were the last of 13 teams to race, had to run in the dark, and though they made it in 22 seconds, it took 8 more to make the coupling, and their mark was 30; making them third in the race, as Ridgeway had 29 1-5 and Hornellsville 29 4-5. Next morning Butler did it in 283-5.

-After thoroughly reviewing th question our Town Council decided to widen and straighten West Wayne St., so that the new bridge could be properly located. This improvement will allow of a straight street from the Car and Lead works to the town, and in all probability make the thoroughfare one of the business streets of the town, besides providing an almost direct route from the great works to the Hospital.

-At Homestead early Friday morn ing a young man named Charles Caw-ley, crazed by incessant thought over the invention of an air brake, procured an ax and killed his mother, two sisters and one brother as they slept, so wounded two more sisters, that their recovery was doubtful and also wounded his little baby brother. After his arrest and ement he knew naught of what he had done

-Quite a number of the men of this county, old and young, either attended the centennial anniversary of the found-ing of Washington and Jefferson College, or read the accounts of the celebration with interest, for that college was their alma-mater. The events of the week beginning with Sunday, marked the beginning of a four days' celebra-tion of the 100th anniversary of the founding of Jefferson college, which was the first of the two colleges of Washington and Jefferson to receive a charter from the state. While it has been but little over 100 years since Jef-ferson college received its charter the celebration was also in honor of the great educational movement which was inaugurated by McMillan, Dodd and Smith as early as 1785. The history of charter from the state. While it has these early pioneer educators is a part of the history of the college and during the week the important events and the history of the men, of those days prior to the founding of the colleges received considerable attention. The college buildings and the town were gayly dec orated for the occasion, the weather was favorable, and this has been a great week for (little) Washington. Jefferson College, at Canonsburg, which was united with Washington college in 1869, was the first college chartered west of the Alleghenies and in the 67 years of its existence it graduated many men who became honored of its existence it graduated many men who became honored members of all the learned professions.
