"I think I'll tell you a bit of luck then," she said, "but I don't know if it will do you any good."

"No, I don't feel like going up on the roof tonight," their owner said wearily a few minutes later.

"I don't know if it will do you any good," she said, "but I don't know if it will do you any good."

UNIQUE PROPOSALS.

SOME RATHER CURIOUS METHODS OF POPPING THE QUESTION.

Writing an Order of Marriage With a Shotgun—Landing a Love Letter With a Waterfall—Fireworks and Vegetables Pressed Into Service.

Miss Annie Oakley, the champion rifle shot, was practicing in a London shooting gallery one day, firing at the regulation cardboard target, when a stranger happened along and, picking up a spare rifle, fired 100 shots thereat, the whole spilling out the following message: "Will you marry me?"

The lady was naturally somewhat surprised; but, not to be outdone, she promptly replied after similar fashion with her own match rifle, "Certainly, no!"

This is probably unique as an offer of marriage, but it is a fact that a young matron living in a south London suburb has in her possession at this present moment several rifle written love letters.

The lady in question was formerly an attendant at a shooting gallery in a certain popular place of amusement near London, and it is a fact that she is "down town" in the manner in which she is known to the public.

The most farmed feature of the beautiful Yosemite valley, in California, is the Bridal Veil fall. It descends from the plateau, nearly 3,000 feet above, in a single ribbon of silvery water, limed luminously against the dark vertical face of the precipice.

Perhaps it was its romantic name which suggested to Charles Evelyn, a young and wealthy San Francisco, to utilize the falling stream in an altogether novel fashion.

At the summit of the cliff, just where the water gathers itself together for its final terrific leap into the abyss below, a sort of vertically sliding sluice door worked so smoothly, and so perfectly that the water, as it passed over, was broken into a spray of raindrops, which fell in a shower upon the heads of the bride and groom.

When his preparations were complete he escorted the bride and groom to the sluice door, where he stood with them for some time, and by alternate raising and lowering the sluice gates above for longer or shorter intervals, he caused the water to fall in a shower upon the heads of the bride and groom.

As soon as the sluice was turned over to him he asked that the other leg should be bared. The plaintiff and Mcweeney objected vigorously, but the judge ordered it done. Then it appeared that his second leg was still more crooked than that which the surgeon had set the first one.

My client seems to have done better by this man than nature itself did," said McKinley. "And I move that the suit be dismissed, with a recommendation to the plaintiff to have the other leg broken and then set by the surgeon who set the first one."

Headless. Headless seems to be one of the seven deadly sins, but could the perpetrator offer witness the result of his act a whole list of casualties would be added to the list.

The Only Exception. "She's unusually conscientious, you say?" "Yes, indeed; even in the smallest details of life."

There by Right. One of the worst ever and whispered to the stranger who had come in and taken a seat: "I beg your pardon, but this is a gathering of working women, not to protest against."

Some of the Bumps a Query Editor. A correspondent writes a sorrowful letter regarding his experiences in running "a correspondents' column" in a weekly paper.

Dear Sir—Where is the universe? Please give illustration. Yours truly, J. PAUL SMITH.
