The County Home.

(Published by request) The county auditors' report shows the following figures relating to the poor farm for the last year: Total expenditures of Butler county poor district, $10,896.84. Included in this total is an item of $1,786.84 for permanent improvements and also the sum of $1,100.46 areas. improvements and also the sum of $1,100.46, amount paid by county commissioners to aid the poor outside of the county home. Deducting these two items from the total reduces it to $5, 000.54. Deducting from this the value of the farm products as set forth by the auditors as amounting to $2,335.75, we have left $5,673.79, the amount actually expended in keeping the poor at the county home last year, and if we add to this the amount given to said the poor county home last year, and if we add to this the amount given to aid the poor

not taken to the home -#1,100.46-it gives us the sum of $6,774.25 as the total cost of keeping the poor of the entire county for the past year.

The last levy of poor tax in the borough of Butler before the county home was ready for use was $10,999.70. It therefore cost Butler boro $4,425.45 more
to keep the poor of the boro in the year 1900 than it did to keep the poor of the entire county in 1902 at the poor farm.
The poor farm cost the county when purchased about $15,000. Its increase in value over the purchase price without the buildings is more than the original cost.

Mr. Anderson came from Allegheny them.

5th. After the polls have closed the judge shall open the box and read to the inspectors the names of persons found properly marked on the ballot, and the inspector shall keep a correct tally list of the votes so read and the tally list and the list of votes shall be certified by the judge and inspectors to be the true and correct return of the votes cast in such district for the various candidates voted for at such primary elections, and shall be returned by the one that day elected return judge and member of the county committee Mr. Anderson came from Allegheny county to the lower part of this county when quite a young man and taught school. Our first recollection of him is as a school teacher. In 1847 he married Miss Ruth Brown, daughter of Adam Brown, and one of a large connection of that name, now mostly living in Penn twp. About 1854 he removed to Meadville and when in 1857 the late Adam Ekis of Clinton twp. was elected Register and Recorder of this county he had Mr. Anderson come back to Butler and take charge of the office. The duties of this office he filled for Mr. Ekis the whole term of three years, and at its close in 1860 Mr. Anderson was himself nominated by the Republican party and by the one that day elected return judge and member of the county committee for such district.

6th. After the ballots have been counted, they, with duplicates of the list of voters, tally papers, and oaths of challenged persons, shall be placed in the box, which shall be properly sealed and placed in the custody of the judge, who shall deliver it to his successor that day elected, the seal shall not be broken until the next primary election unless ordered by or in the presence of the county committee, which shall have power to decide all cases of contested elections. On the day of the holding of the next primary election all boxes shall be opened and the tickets destroyed by the judge having them in charge.

7th. It shall be the duty of the judge of primary elections as soon as the count close in 1600 att. Anderson was ministed in mominated by the Republican party and elected Register and Recorder. Competition and the General Public.

The old truism "Competition is th fe of trade' stirs an echo in the breast feyery right thinking man, and in no ther business is competition of such ital importance to the public as in that f transportation. A greater proportion f the public is directly affected by this of the public is directly affected by this medium than by any other branch of business; it comes home alike to the dealer and to the customer.

Monopoly of public utilities is detrimental to progress and in no way can the public good be better conserved than by healthy competition in the transportation business. Such rivalry is productive of moderan equipment and improvements: more courteens atten-and a higher class of service in every respect.

In general lines of business the tendancy is toward competion, but in the business of transporting the public the other extreme is the rule. In the great majority of the cities the street railway systems are owned and controlled by one man or combination of men, who by political patronage and by the use of money, make competition impossible. A noted writer on Political Economy says "The interests of the people are best served by municipal ownership of public utilities, and next to this the healthy competition of a rival company is the best safeguard of the public welfare."
