AS THROUGH A GLASS

By LILIAN C. PASCHAL. Copyright, 1903, by the McClure Company.

"Will you look at that?" Miss Davidson swung around on her swivel chair and held an open letter toward "Katherine Howard, Editor Woman's Page," known in private life as Jack Higgins.

He took his feet down from his desk and his cigarette from his mouth, which small inclinations lose their impotence in the good clausm of newspaperdom, even if he had not been her cousin and privileged, and read aloud:

New York, Oct. 7. Dear Miss Howard—Will you please advise me as to the position of the stars in any particular year, and as, according to astrological lore, the destinies of men are ruled by the different aspects of the planets, so also the human body is subject to the influence of the constellations through which the sun appears to pass in his yearly course. A French almanac of 1910 gives a diagram of the human body surrounded by all the signs of the zodiac and indicates the various organs and members over which these signs have power, and this for a guide poor lay sages, or to show at what periods blood may be let with safety. But the same almanac also gives directions sensible enough for the avoidance of the plague which would not be found fault with by a modern fashionable physician:

"Who would keep his body in health and resist the infection of the plague, let him seek joy and sadness fly. Avoid places where infectious abound And cherish joyous company."

A few examples exist of almanacs of this character before the invention of printing, although none is believed earlier than the twelfth century. But some of the earliest specimens of printing are black printed German sheet almanacs which are printed at the same time about blood letting—All the Year Round.

Early Time Systems. The gnomon, the predecessor of the sundial, was probably one of the earliest devices for the reckoning of time, and it may reasonably be concluded that the Egyptian pyramids, with their great altitude, formed part of a design for timekeeping by the shadow of the gnomon on the desert sands. The obelisk, too, in all probability served the purpose, for as a matter of history an obelisk at Rome was actually used for a sundial in the time of Emperor Augustus.

If we could step on board of a Malay prahu, we should see floating in a bucket of water a coconut shell having a small hole in the bottom through which the water by slow degrees finds its way into the interior. The hole in the shell is so proportioned that the shell will sink in an hour when the man on watch calls the time and sets it afloat again.

The Chinese have a water clock in use at the present time, which invention they ascribe to Hwangti, who lived, according to their chronology, more than twenty-five centuries before Christ.

The time system of early Rome was of the rudest character. The day and night were divided into four watches, the length of which were roughly determined by observations of the course of the sun and stars.

Lincoln's Strongest Attribute. The strongest attribute of Lincoln was his power of self control. Sentimentality might sway him, but a mob never moved him. When the British army beat a popular clamor against General Grant, while the latter was winning famous victories in the southwest, Lincoln listened to no word of defiance of the general who afterward became the admiration of the world. When in the fevered heat of the war an angry mob demanded the execution of the death penalty upon Jefferson Davis, Lincoln listened in silence and waited for reason to resume its sway. He was always looking over the heads of the crowd. He was always listening to the still small voice that called to him to do right.
