Sudden Death of J. Kaufmann The Alaskan Boundary. Julius Kanfmann, a well known dry-goods man of Butler. died suddenly in the North Cemetery, Tuesday morning. He left his store-room about 9 o'clock, saying he would be back soon : did some errands on Main street and then walked to stagger and fall in the cemetery; he died in a few minutes. His body was taken to his home and a Coroner's jury, that evening recorded his death as from "unknown causes." He is said to have been financially embarassed. and to have been heavily insured. He was a native of Philadelphia, located in Butler in 1890. Is survived by a wife, nee Schloss, and three children, His remains were taken to Philadelphia.
