THE SHIP'S PURSER.

Some of the Things That Make His life at Times a Burden.

The lot of the purser is anything but a happy one. From his title one would think that he had only to look after the finance of the vessel, but in reality his office, so conveniently and pictur ly situated at the top of the grand stair case, is really as busy a bureau as any in Capel court or Wall street. It is no doubt legitimate enough to expect the purser to be quite au fait with the monetary matters, to explain to the Britisher the difference between a dollar and a crown or to the American that the greenback is treated with scorn and contumely in Europe, but our American friends are par excel-lence the interrogators of the world, and to them the purser is simply a

He is expected to tell them all about the ship—that's right enough—but they want to know all about the passengers as well, who they are, where they have how much they are worth and any lit tle titbit of news about their social life.
