The Ethics of Gambling

A good deal of noise is being made wer the purchase of a $10,000,000 plant and selling it for something like $50, 00,000. The transaction looks fishy probably seems unprecedented, but in reality does not essentially differ from most speculative actions. The stock market, the wheat, corn and cotton cor ners, are of the same nature, but no much is said about these. The other day a man cornered the cotton market and retired with seven millions more than he took into the corner with him. The general course of comment was that he was a pretty smart fellow. John W. Gates, who made all his millions in the same way, denounces the Schwab transaction as something very reprehensible. Some other multi-mil lionaires think it a naughty trick mmission turns out to have not been Though not a millionaire we are inclin-one sided in our favor as was at first ed to regard it unfavorably, also. But apposed. Dyea and Skagway, and the so, also, the millionaires of the cotton and provision markets seem to us not boundary line was moved very competent critics of speculative transactions in which they are not beneficiaries. Every man of the brood i quence, and we won in the affirmation a gambler. Every man who bulls and the principle for which the United bears stocks is a gambler. The man States has constantly contended, the who plays poker for money is a gam principle that the boundary should be bler. So, if Mr. Schwab watered the vn as to give the owner of Alaska stocks of the shipbuilding trust from ten to fifty millions, he gambled.

The amount a gambler wins does no affect the transaction. The principle is the same whether the gain is a hundred dollars or forty millions. For what on man gains somebody loses. The object treaty of 1825 directed, to the of the gambler is to possess something belonging to another, or to others, with has been construed to mean the edge of out a quid pro quo. Such are the eth inland, and not the ocean side of ics of gambling. If a property fairly the islands by which the mainland is worth ten millions is sold for fifty millions, only persons or coporations has ing credit to the extent of fifty million could have been purchasers. The own ing and all British America will soon be part of the United States of North will not go to the almshouse therefor. The public is not to assume that the fifty millions represents cash. It repre investors are not likely to be much inerested in the huge transaction. The chief property involved is said to be fairly valued at ten millions. If we suppose that ten millions in actual cast has been paid in we do not see how anybody can lose. For if the plant is worth ten millions it is worth it because the plant has that earning capacity that is, if properly operated, the net earnings will afford at least five per cent per annum on the capital invested. All beyond the ten millions may b water, which can earn nothing, because mething cannot be derived from nothing. is that Mr. Schwab is worth any millions more than he knows what to do with. Why should he in rest in forty millions of water? Had be bought Lake Erie and capitalized it we could understand it. But there is no waterway in watered stocks. They are not navigable. It may be said that such stocks may be manipulated, but that is done every day. It is not so new as to excite our special wonder. After Consolidated Lake Superior we annot affect much surprise at the fiasco Schwab is in that frame of mind that dmits of almost anything. What is nost surpising is that any clear headed person takes part in his schemes. We loubt if any sensible person has invest-Company, nor do we see why a man who has shares which he never intended to pay for can lose anything when Obituary. W. C. Kennedy of Mars died at the Municipal Hospital in Allegheny, last Sanday of small pox.

His heart broken by the necessity for liquidation of the First National bank of Allegheny, Edward R. Kramer of Sewickley for 35 years cashier of the institution, died last Friday at his home on River avenue, Sewickley. The death was sudden. He had shown signs of depression ever the profortunate. depression over the unfortunate con-ditions faced by the First National of Allegheny, but nothing of this kind was looked for. Last Friday at noon while at his home his spirit broke and a total collapse occurred. The efforts of physicians could not help him and he died six hours later.

The first cashier of the bank was Col. John D. Kramer, father of Edward R. Kramer, Col. Kramer took the position when the bank first opened its doors in 1862, and when he laid down the care of the task his son assumed. Rev. Buzza of Chicora will deliver a lecture in the M. E. church at Greece City on Friday evening, November 6. His subject will be "The Ideal Man."

Eyesight, Nerve and Headache Specialists and Opticians.

They will be at the Willard Hotel, Butler, November 2 and 3 .--- Mr. and Mrs. Mahaffey and Miss Miller, of New York and Pittsburg, will make their first visit to our city.

This being an advertising trip to introduce this new system they will give consultation, examination and advice necessary to complete a cure free.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahaffey and Miss Miller have enjoyed advantages that very few in this country have. Do not explain your case to these opticians, but let them examine your eyes, after which they will explain to you your case and locate our symptoms without asking a question.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahaffey and Miss Miller have had a whole life of study and experience in their profession and have enjoyed advantages that very few have

Institute, they have had several years experience in their elegant parlors in New York, in addition to their later experience with the large number of people they have examined and fitted almost every day in the year, for several years past, They give free examinations, their prices are reasonable, and no one is ever urged to buy They give correct measurements for frames, with the same care and precision with which they test the eyes for glasses, and consider one about as important as
