MARRYING A TITLE. By Frank Leslie Bowen.

Gerald Elkins was seriously disturbed over his mother's cold blooded proposal to secure a titled son-in-law. He loved his sparkling, vivacious, warm hearted sister, and his soul was in revolt at the idea of forcing her to make a loveless marriage.

"Tom, old man, you are still single and free, aren't you?" The other nodded in mild surprise. "Good! I didn't know that but you had met your fate during the three years you were in England. Do you remember the sight of you put a queer idea into my head. You remember my little sister, Elmore? You saw her once about six years ago. She was only a little girl then, but I remember you said you thought her deucedly pretty."

"The other's brown eyes kindled at the recollection. "Well, of course she is a young lady now and, if I do say it, one of the loveliest girls that you'll meet in many a mile of travel. Most unfortunately, my mother has determined to marry Elmore off to some duffer with a title, and she's badgering the life out of the poor girl about it. So far Elmore has turned down all the offers, but she's badgering him, though she says she is willing to marry one provided she loves him, she draws the line at the half baked specimens of nobility that the market has sprung on her. I want you to come to the rescue, Tom. Go in and win the little sister yourself and save her from a life of wretchedness."

"My clerk, however, regards the matter as a good joke, and I half suspect that he acknowledges relationship in a good many cases intentionally so as to cause complications. I have shown the photograph to several people who have made the mistake, but it has no influence upon them, whatever, and it is impossible to convince them against their will." "New York Mail and Express."

"Darnell's Loves. In his young days Darnell fell under the spell of the "gorgeous Lady Bessie" who was a beauty of the first order. She was breathing something more than friendship. For example, in 1834: "I was so sorry to leave London without being able to call on New York, though I came to the opera the last night on purpose, fate was against me. I did not reach this place until Sunday night, I indeed from the pains of parting. I did not feel as though I had done it, but I do not think that I ever shall be able to settle to anything again. It is a great shame, when people are happy together, and they should be ever separated, but it seems the greatest object of the human condition that people should never be happy together."

"She Did Not Drop. "Della," "Yes, ma'am." "I'm very tired, and I am going to bed for an hour." "Yes, ma'am." "If I should happen to drop off call me at 5 o'clock." "Yes, ma'am." "So my lady lies down, folds her hands, closes her eyes and is soon in the land of nod. Long after it has left the nest, the clock striking 6 and calls indignantly: "Della!" "Della," "Why didn't you call me at 5 o'clock as I ordered?" "Shure, ma'am, ye would me to call ye if ye dropped off. I looked in on ye at 5, and ye hadn't dropped off at all. Ye was lyin' in the bed in the same place sound asleep."

"The Town of Yafa. Famous in History and the Most Interesting Spot in Palestine. Yafa is a little town that was many times destroyed. Jews, Assyrians, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans and Persians have ruled it. It was the birthplace of King of Tyre, sent the cedar wood "in flutes" which from there were taken to Jerusalem for Solomon's temple. Jonah sailed from this little town to Tarshish when fleeing from the face of the Lord. It was in Yafa that the humble Dorcas lived her life of good deeds and upon her dying was raised to life by Peter. To this shore the great Richard Coeur de Lion swam, girded in armor, fighting for Christendom, and won a victory for the crusaders over the Saracens. Bonaparte left a memory of his cruelty here by his massacre of several thousand prisoners and the poisoning of some persons afflicted with the plague. Simon the Tanner's house, where Peter learned that all nations were acceptable before God, is one of the few sights to be seen in Yafa. In the courtyard there is a large well of spring water, and from the roof of the house a most beautiful view of the surrounding country presents itself. Another site of interest is the tomb of Tabitha, which stands in the garden of the Greek monastery, close to an old fountain, among the orange groves and fruit orchards. Of towns in Palestine, Yafa is one of the most interesting for its antiquity and its strange mixture of the oriental in its most primitive form with European civilization gradually admitted."

"When she whispered, 'I love you, Tom,' he took her in his arms and shamelessly acknowledged the debt he had practiced upon her and Mrs. Elkins. Miscellaneous dimples danced about the corners of her sweet mouth as she believed in his sincerity. "Tom Carrington," she cried gleefully and to his great consternation, "I knew who you were the moment I saw you in the Herald. A school-teacher, however, forgets a young man as well, particularly if he is a—a—well, rather good looking fellow. I knew you were not 'Lord Carmichael.' I don't believe I should have learned to like you so well if you had been. I have grown prejudiced against titles since I've been in Europe. Of course, I forgot you, you had, I don't know, but I can't say what mamma will do." "Mamma" did just what Tom anticipated when he told her of his love for her daughter and bravely confessed that she had been guilty of an atrocious hoax in passing as Lord Carmichael. Apologies availed him naught. Even when Gerald broke in and attempted to assume responsibility for the whole affair and to explain that Carrington was rich and really connected with a noble English family, Mrs. Elkins' wrath was not abated one jot. In a state of passion she ordered the young man to leave her apartment and never again to intrude his presence on her or her daughter.

"There was a conference that evening between Gerald and Tom at another Berlin hotel, with the result that the next morning, long before the hour of Mrs. Elkins' awakening, Elmore stole out of her room. She was dressed for bright, the visitor is crowned in the pearls she that tones, attenuates, unless, most if not all of London, that she had not been in London for ever so long. Even over Piccadilly, even over the most mundane of all London streets, it throws its saving glamour. Indeed, it shows the splendid avenue that leads to a studio, not for its values alone, but for the complexity of the types that throng it. It is the quintessence of London, the distillation of all London's humanity, to be studied nowhere so narrowly as from a bus stop. Perfect Du Mauriers in the original approach, pass by and are left behind as if in a dream, looking from the club windows. Phil Mays in the life of swarms beneath one, and characters from Thackeray and Dickens loom unsuspiciously on the sidewalk. The clubs alone, which never look so thoroughly clubbable as when hastily glanced at from a passing bus, will store one's memory with a hundred scenes that will never fade. It is not only a great pleasure to take in extending an invitation to you, your husband and to my dear friend, but also a long visit at Castle Weldon after June 1. With deepest regards, WELDON."

"Facial Resemblance. "Physiologists tell us," observed a well known lawyer the other day, "that no two faces are exactly alike, and I think they are correct, although we often hear of one person being the exact image of another. That this is largely a matter of imagination can be proved by investigation. For example, I have in my office a clerk who is constantly mistaken for another person. People say he resembles me so closely that I must be joking when I deny the relationship. In order to ascertain how much reason there was for these statements I took the fellow to a photographer's one day last week, and we both had our pictures taken together, and I would defy any one to point out a single point of resemblance." "My clerk, however, regards the matter as a good joke, and I half suspect that he acknowledges relationship in a good many cases intentionally so as to cause complications. I have shown the photograph to several people who have made the mistake, but it has no influence upon them, whatever, and it is impossible to convince them against their will." "New York Mail and Express."

"In Russia, where the cold in winter is very intense, the markets are very curious things. The meat is frozen, the carcasses of dead animals, as sheep and pigs, stand upright outside the shops, everything, even game and poultry, requires to be thawed before it can be cooked, and the market people's dress is picturesque as it is warm and comfortable. Then the rivers are frozen over all the winter long, and so thick is the ice that every one can skate anywhere and any time. Stalls are put up on the ice and busy markets held there. In the Asiatic part of Russia the people live chiefly by hunting and fishing, and the Russian animals are very beautiful—the ermine, fox, sable, sea otter and others. At the end of the winter, when the snow melts, the Russian peasants, elk, wearing long shoes, in which he can glide over the snow very quickly, while the poor elk sinks into the snow deeper and deeper every step and is at last overtaken and killed. His Two Purchases. A story is told of a Louisiana merchant who came to New York to determine to take a bargain. He wanted cheap cloaks, and after trying in vain to suit himself at the wholesale houses he bought a job lot at auction. He examined the goods hurriedly and had them shipped home. In due time he was confronted by an excited head salesman who said the garments were out of style. "They aren't," replied the clerk. "The merchant persisted that the cloaks were out of fashion, and in desperation he returned them to New York to be disposed of to best advantage. On his next trip to New York he bought a lot of cloaks. When he returned home and examined his purchase he saw that he had bought the same lot as before—Weldon's work."

"The Bird Monopoli. As is generally known, the cuckoo lays its eggs in the nests of other birds, leaving them to be hatched and the young cuckoo reared by their foster parents. The young cuckoo throws the other birds out of the nest and gets all the care itself. After moulting into its adult plumage, it returns to its foster brothers and sisters in the most deliberate and callous way it is capable of, tending with the greatest devotion the young of the other birds. Long after it has left the nest, the great bird, apparently big enough to get its own living and many times larger than its foster parents, is followed about and fed by them with the same care as when in the nest. "As I ordered?" "Shure, ma'am, ye would me to call ye if ye dropped off. I looked in on ye at 5, and ye hadn't dropped off at all. Ye was lyin' in the bed in the same place sound asleep."

"Taking and Giving. "You can't," said the philosopher, "take from a thing without making it less." "Oh, I don't know," the fool replied. "Have you ever tried taking a light from one candle with another?" "Chicago Record-Herald." "A Natural Desire. "Sm—I wonder what Br-w-n intends to do with all the money he got for those historical novels he wrote. "J-n-s—He intends to travel. He feels that he ought to visit some of the places he wrote about just to see what they are like—Life."

"The Broken Engagement. Isabel—Weren't you congenial? "Arabella—Not at all. He made me jealous, and I couldn't make him jealous. —Detroit Free Press. "How do they get on together?" "Famously." They quarrel continually, and their quarrels all get into the newspapers.—Life. The range of hearing in animals under 375,000 vibrations per second. 45,000 to 48,000 vibrations per second.
