which he opens the subject. The Senator begins the releyant part of his manifesto as follows:—

"Governor Pennypacker never was and is not now a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Supreme Court. He has not sought, nor will he seek, that nomination. He has not signified that he will accept it if tendered him, and if he is wise he will keep his counsel upon that question."

As the public discussion of the matter was really started by the letter of Governor Pennypacker to the Philadelphia Ledger, in which he declared that he saw no impropriety in his seeking the place, and that if nominated, he would accept the nomination, the third of the sexetions quoted alevale in it. would accept the nominated, he would accept the nomination, the third of the assertions quoted above is in direct collision with the specific facts. Moreover, when a man in the Governor's position publicly and through the press says that he will accept a nomination he is a candidate. Senator Quay's political education may lead him to believe that a man'has not sought a nomination" unless he has begun to nail delegates by promises of office or other consideration, but that rule can hardly apply in the matter of a Governor seeking a place on the Supreme Bench.

It is, therefore, plain that the governing rule for the Senator's statements in this letter is not what is the fact, but what is the statement that the Senator thinks will produce the desired public effect. As to the Senator's theories of public propriety, they are not surprising. They accord entirely with a record of reform platforms wholly repudiated aud offers to shake the plum tree.

Can it be possible that Quay is lylng about that Pennypacker business—and, if so, what degree of liar is he? Is he an expert?

Feb. 13, 1944, Mrs. Mary Dougan,

But this quiet was disturbed in the spring of the year, 1849, when a letter was received by the postmaster, Frank Wadsworth, at North Liberty, from some of the leading men of Pittsburg, containing the information that they had received a notice that if $40,000 was not sent to M L Robins, of North Liberty, Mercer County, Pa., against such a date, Pittsburg would be visited by a more disastrous fire than that of 1846. The letter further stated that the money demanded would be sent, and the postmaster was requested to have the proper officer on hand to arrest any person who came to secure the booty.

The postmaster was a shoemaker, and worked at his trade in a rear room.

It is a point concluded the only safe course was to guard the treasure until morning. Accordingly a strong force was made up of the men of the neighborhood, who spent a sleepless night, and when the stage came along a message was sent to the sheriff at Mercer, and Deputy Thos.

Person came out and took charge of the men advancement but for the reigney of this friend that he plunged for William advancement but for the triumph of his friend that he plunged heart and soul into the contest of 1896, from which he emerged one of the most powerful men in the nation's politics. When it was known that the contest was entrusted solely the sheriff at Mercer, and Deputy Thos. Pearson came out and took charge of the package, which was taken to Mercer and there epened in the presence of proper authorities, and lo! instead of $40,000 in crisp bank notes, it was found to contain nothing but brown paper. On the following night, Israel Bash, the stage driver, who had assisted in the capture, had a shot fired at him by some unknown person, as he drove through the darkness of the woods, which bordered the road.

Who M. L. Robins was, has never been disclosed. It was thought by some that he was one of a gang of countermost powerful men in the hatten politics. When it was known that McKinley's cause was entrusted solely to his guidance there were many doubts as to the wisdom of the selection of a man so new to the national field of action. But the solution of those doubts by his tireless energy placed him at the head of party affairs. It is true that he used the prominence thus that he used the prominence thus gained for his own benefit later on; bu
