STORY OF THE CUE. Mercantile Appraiser's

WHY THE CHINAMAN WEARS HAIR IN A LONG BRAID.

Thereby Hangs an Ancient Tale of Ardent Love and Ruthless War. The Way Manchuria Rose Through China's Sacrifice to a Lover's Rage.

The cue that every Chinaman wears is the badge of his servitude to the Mantchoos, for they, in the conquest of Peking and the replacement of the princely house, imposed their own national headdress on the people of all of the finest and fiercest love stories ever told. The story is related in ex-

Consul General Rounseville Wildman's

book, "China's Open Door." It all happened in the years 1643 and 1644. The Ming emperor, Chwang Lich Ti, had two rebellions on his BUFFALO 2 and was marching victoriate, while At his approach the emperor went out and hanged himself on a tree in his garden. Everything seemed propitious for Li's triumph and his assumption of the imperial throne.

But in the north there was a power which was greater than that of Li. It was that of Wu Sankwei, a mighty Chinese general, who commanded the fortress of Ningyuen and who had long held at bay the Mantchoo tribes in that quarter. Wu Sankwei, with an army of veterans, was on his way to the capital to fight for the lawful au-thority when he received a letter from his father, Wu, urging him to submit

It is every Chinaman's duty to obey in this case and kept a Chinese dynasty on the throne if a stronger love than the fillal had not dominated his heart. Sankwei was on the point of fonder. Sankwel was on the point of tendering his allegiance to Li when he heard that a beautiful slave girl, belonging to him, to whom he was wholly devoted, had the was wholly devoted, had the was wholly devoted. to whom he was wholly devoted, had the standard of the selected and presented to one of Li's officers. Then his fury against the victorious role chieftain rose and victorious rebel chieftain rose and knew no bounds.

In his love for this girl, says the historian Wn Sankard fordan Wn torian, Wu Sankwei forgot filial obedi-ence, his own future, the safety of his family and every consideration of pa-triotism. He was possessed only by a mighty passion of grief and anger. He wrote one letter to his father, upbraid-Welsh Jas. store.....

The Mantchoos did not hesitate a moment. They pushed their army forward by forced marches to a junction with Sankwei. Li, astonished at the intra of affairs and determined to crush the man who dared dispute his title, advanced rapidly with 200,000 picked infantry and 20,000 cavalry. In the front line he marched Wu, the aged forther of Sankwei who hy all the desther of Sankwei who hy all the defather of Sankwei, who, by all the decrees of Confucius, Sankwei was bound to obey, even to the sacrifice of his own life and honor.

The father not only ordered him, but pleaded with him, to submit, but the vision of the outraged girl steeled the heart of his son, and he stood helpless while the father was being murdered while the lattle was being much before his eyes.

The battle that followed was one of the most necely contested as well as one of the most noted in history. Sankwei was outmarched and outnumbered, but not outgenerated. He fought with his troe, like the very spirit of the his troe, during the bat-fearful storm that rap. wei was outmarched and outnumbered teen miles Sankwei pursued the usurp-to the government buildings. Sankwei, however, was close on his heels. He left the empire to the Mant-choos, the sacking of the city to the troops, and the bodies of his family unburied, but he swept on, tireless, remorseless, bent solely on revenge. His mistress was dead, his father murder ed, his family obliterated, but Li still Battle succeeded battle. Li. deserted by his followers, hunted like a mad dog, with all doors shut to him, and impossible, was killed by the rustics whom he was plundering for food, and Sankwel arrived only to claim the corpse of the rebel and murderer who for a few hours had dared to sit on the sacred dragon throne.

Leaving Sankwei to avenge the death of his mistress, Dorgun entered Peking in January, 1644. He proclaim ed his youthful charge, his six-year-old nephew, emperor, and formally transferred the Mantchoo capital from Mukden to Peking. The young prince, who adopted the title of Shunchih, arrived October, and with his advent th Mantchoo, or Tsing, dynasty, which Thus the cue that every Chinaman wears today may justly be claimed as a badge of mourning for the beautiful slave girl of General Wu Sankwel, who in his grief and anger sealed the fate of the Chinese nationality. But for her the Mantchoo would have remained to this day a league of scatter ed tribes on China's frontier.—New York Mail.

THE COSSACKS.

Favorite Camp Story Through Which Generals Are Criticised. Unlike other Russian soldiers, the Cossacks are very intelligent in milltary matters and do not hesitate to criticise their generals freely among themselves. They have bitter tongues and a genius for satire. There is a favorite story which has been told in Cossack camps for generations. It is handed down from father to son, the ames being changed to fit the mili-ry commanders of the day. Freely dated, it runs something like this; are war god of Russia was asleep heaven one day when he was awak-ned by the confused clamor of two osts in battle on the earth beneath. He shouted to the Angel Gabriel:

"Look out and see what my Cosacks are doing." "They are fighting the Turks, and Prince Potemkin is leading them."

"Oh, that's all right," said the war od. "He's a good man." So the delty went asleep again, only to be awakened by another turmoil. "What's that?" he asked sleepily.
"They are fighting the Turks again "He's a fine fellow. They'll do all bly around the campfire, each man adding the name of his favorite commakes the Angel Gabriel mention the name of some general who happens to be regarded by the Cossacks as a duffer. Then the next man makes the war god reply in accents of great Pelle Frank, store......

"Oh, my beloved Cossacks! They must be perishing under that man! It is time I interfered. Hasten, Gabriel, That and bring me my long boots, for I Th
