Samuel Andrews, who first induced John D. Rockefeller to go into the oil business, died at Atlantic City a few days ago, He was a native of England, coming to this country in 1857 and locating at Cleveland, where he became impressed with the possibilities of the oil business. In 1862 he persuaded John D. Rockefeller to invest in the business with him and subsequently the firm of Clark & Rockefeller invested more heavily in the same way. From this nucleus grew the Standard Oil Company. Andrews was concerned chiefly with the mechanical and technical methods of the business, leaving its diplomatic and manipulative features to his associates.

great for the world's work." In this single salient sentence, uttered in his famous address at Buffalo in September, 1901. President McKinley described the object and the result of expositions.

A modern universal exposition is a collection of the wisdom and achievements of the world, for the inspection of the world, for the inspection of the world, for the study of its experts, by which they may make comparisons and deduction and develop plans for future improvements and progress. Such a universal exposition might well be called an encyclopedia of society. It constitutes a classified, compact, indexed compendium of the achievements and ideas of society in all phases of its activity, extending to the most material as well as the most refined. It offers illustrations covering the full field of social performance, from the production of the shoes on our feet and the pavement beneath them to a presentation of the shoes on our feet and the pavement beneath them to a presentation of the rarest and most delicate creations of the brains and hands of men in what are called the fine arts of civilization.

The Universal Exposition in St. Louis in 1904 will be such a social encyclopedia in the most comprehensive and accurate sense. It will give to the world in revised and complete details in all that certain piece or parcel of land, situated in Clinton to the shoes on our feet and the pavement beneath them to a presentation of the rarest and most delicate creations of the brains and hands of men in what are called the fine arts of civilization.

The Universal Exposition in St. Louis in 1904 will be such a social encyclopedia in the most comprehensive and accurate sense. It will give to the world in revised and complete details "a living picture of the artistic and industrial development at which mandustrial development at which man-kind has arrived" and will actually provide "a new starting point from which all men may direct future exerwhich all her may direct that each tions." It will present for the inspection of specialists in all lines of industrial and social endeavor and for the public an assembly of the best which the world has done and has to show in industry, art and science, and, what is very important, it will offer these achievements of society, these trophies of civilization in a highly selected, accurately classified array.

The creators of the St. Louis Exposition have had the experience of all previous great expositions by which to The continuous and repeated burden of the message of experience handed down by all expositions has been more perfect, more effective classification and arrangement of exhibits.

The classification of the St. Louis Exposition has been prepared to preprogress. On its bases will be assembled the most highly organized exposition the world has yet seen.

The St. Louis classification is divided into 16 departments, 144 groups and 807 classes. These grand departments in their order will record what man has accomplished at this time with his faculties, industry and skill and the natural resources at his command in the environment in which he has been

At the head of the Exposition classification has been placed Education, through which man enters social life. Second comes Art, showing the condi-tion of his culture and development. his education and culture, illustrate his tastes and demonstrate his inventive genius, scientific attainment and artisprepare him for the enjoyments of life.
The raw material departments, Agriestry, show how man conserves the what he has done with them; the De has used. The Department of Transportation will show how he overcomes distances and secures access to all of Electricity will indicate forces he has discovered and utilized to convey power and intelligence. And so through the several departments to Anthropology, in which man studies man; and to Social Economy, which will illustrate the development of the human race, how it has overcome the difficulties of civilization and solved problems in which society is involved. Last is placed physical culture, in which man, his intelligence having reached the supreme point, is able to treat himself as an animal, realizing tutions require a sound physical body

Education is the keynote of the Universal Exposition of 1904. Each de partment of the world's labor and de velopment will be represented at St Louis, classified and installed in such manner that all engaged or interested and see, examine, study and go away advised.
