A WISE OLD FOX.

One Who For a Long Time Cleverly Eluded the Hounds.

In common with other people who have looked after fox coveys I have often been puzzled by the disappearance of well known foxes and have become convinced that the more intelligent foxes, after they have been hunted bounds several times, or even turned out in the open, do not being hunted, in a small covert that I know well there was always a fox. A fine big fellow he was. I have more than once met him in the open, but he never let me get close to him. He was a fox of the old school, and he was a fox of the old school. He was a fox of the old school, and he was a fox of the old school.

MARVELS OF MEMORY.

Feats of Famous Men That Seem All Most Beyond Belief.

Some examples of the marvels of memory would seem to be incredible had they not been given to us upon the highest authority. Cyrus knew the name of each soldier in his army. It is also related of Columbus that he could tell by name every citizen of Athens, although the number amounted to 20,000. Mithridates, king of Pontus, knew all his 50,000 soldiers by their right names.

GLOVES IN EARLY DAYS.

They Were Often Made to Represent the Man Who Wore Them.

In the early days everything was not regulated for the people, as it is now, by the government and the law courts. Europe was still young then, and people had rough and ready means of dealing with one another, of buying and selling, of giving goods and property and settling disputes. A glove, as it was very close indeed to a man's hand, came in course of time to be looked upon as being the place of the hand itself, and sometimes took the man's place and was made to represent him.

Narrow Chests.

The old theory that consumption was inherited is utterly discarded by modern medical science. The germs of consumption must be received from without. These germs are everywhere. They are constantly being received and cast out by the healthy system. In narrow chests, however, the germs are not cast out, and they multiply and cause disease.
