

VOL. XXXI.

KECK Merchant Tailor. Fall and Winter Suitings JUST ARRIVED. 142 North Main St.

The Most Complete and Extensive Stock of Fall Underwear for Ladies, Children and Men. THE MODERN STORE. We make a specialty of underwear and have, beyond a doubt, the best line in Butler.

The Bargain Counter. Unfavorable weather and trade conditions that have existed all season are responsible for more than the usual quantity of desirable merchandise finding its outlet by way of the bargain counter.

Shirt Waists Reduced. Entire stock of "Acorn" brand fine shirt waists at one-fourth off and some at one-third off former prices.

White Goods Reduced. A great chance to get bargains in white goods. 50c goods reduced to 25c, 35c and 50c goods reduced to 15c and others in proportion.

Bargains in Wash Goods. All wash goods greatly reduced. 35 and 50c fine wash goods now 10c. 90c and 18c fine wash goods now 12c. 15c wash goods now 8c.

Bargains in Every Department. Silks, Dress Goods, Laces, Ribbons, Underwear, Hosiery, Notions and domestic all contribute their share of bargains.

L. Stein & Son, 108 N. MAIN STREET, BUTLER, PA.

BICKEL'S FALL FOOTWEAR. Largest Stock and most Handsome Styles of Fine Footwear we have ever shown.

Sorosis Shoes. Twenty new Fall styles—Dongola, Enamel and Patent-kid, made in the latest up-to-date styles.

Men's Shoes. Showing all the latest styles in Men's fine shoes, all leathers, $2.00 to $6.00.

Rubber and Felt Goods. Our stock of Rubber and Felt Goods is extremely large, and owing to the large orders which we placed, we were able to get very close prices and are in a position to offer you the lowest prices for best grades of Felt and Rubber Goods.

JOHN BICKEL, BUTLER, PA.

A Determination Sale. Ever hear of one? We call it a DETERMINATION SALE because we are determined to carry over no Spring and Summer goods if cut prices will remove them.

Wm. Walker, Chas. A. McElvain, WALKER & McELVAIN, 607 Butler County National Bank Bldg. EAL ESTATE. INSURANCE. OIL PROPERTIES. LOANS. BOTH PHONES.

Wm. H. Miller, FIRE and LIFE INSURANCE, and REAL ESTATE. OFFICE—Room 508, Butler County National Bank building.

Schau & Nast, LEADING CLOTHIERS and FURNISHERS, 137 South Main St., Butler.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS. PHYSICIANS. DR. JULIA E. FOSTER, OSTEOPATH. Consultation and examination free. Office hours—9 to 12 A. M., 2 to 5 P. M., daily except Sunday. Evening appointment.

GEORGE M. BEATTY, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. Office in John Richey Building. Office Hours—9-11 A. M., 2-3:30-5:30 P. M., 6:30-8:30 P. M. Sunday—9-10:45 A. M., 1-3:00 P. M. Night calls 381 N. Washington St. People's Phone 739.

DR. H. J. NEELY, Rooms 6 and 7, Hughes Building, South Main St. Chronic diseases of genito-urinary organs and rectum treated by the most approved methods.

J. C. BOYLE, M. D., EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT. After April 1st, office in Fort St. Peters residence, No. 121 E. Cunningham St., Butler, Pa., next door to printing office.

CLARA E. MORROW, D. O., GRADUATE BOSTON COLLEGE OF OSTEOPATHY. Women's diseases a specialty. Consultation and examination free. Office Hours, 9 to 12 m., 2 to 3 p. m. People's Phone 573. 116 S. Main street, Butler, Pa.

G. M. ZIMMERMAN, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. At 297 N. Main St.

R. HAZLETT, M. D., 106 West Diamond, Dr. Graham's former office. Special attention given to Eye, Nose and Throat. People's Phone 274.

SAMUEL M. BIPPUS, PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. 200 West Cunningham St.

DR. S. A. JOHNSTON, SURGEON DENTIST. Formerly of Butler. Has located opposite Lovoy House, Main St., Butler, Pa. The finest work of teeth by his new method, no medicine used or jabbing a needle into the gums also gas and ether used. Communications by mail receive prompt attention.

DR. J. WILBERT MCKEE, SURGEON DENTIST. Office over Leightner's Jewelry store, Butler, Pa. Peoples Telephone 503. A specialty made of gold fillings, gold crown and bridges.

W. J. HINDMAN, DENTIST. 121 1/2 South Main street, (over Metzger's shoe store).

DR. H. A. MCCANDLESS, DENTIST. Office in Butler County National Bank Building, 2nd floor.

DR. M. D. KOTTRABA, Successor to Dr. Johnston. DENTIST. Office at No. 114 E. Jefferson St., over G. W. Miller's grocery.

J. DONALDSON, DENTIST. Artificial teeth inserted on the latest improved plan. Gold Fillings a specialty. Office next to postoffice.

W. C. FINDLEY, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, and PEPPER CO. ATTORNEY. Office on South side of Diamond, Butler, Pa.

R. P. SCOTT, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW. Office in Butler County National Bank building.

A. T. SCOTT, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Office at No. 8, West Diamond St. Butler, Pa.

COULTER & BAKER, ATTORNEYS AT LAW. Office in Butler County National Bank building.

JOHN W. COULTER, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW. Office on Diamond, Butler, Pa. Special attention given to collections and business matters.

J. D. McJUNKIN, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW. Office in Reber building, corner Main and E. Cunningham Sts., Entrance on Main street.

J. B. BREDIN, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Office on Main St. near Court House.

H. H. GOUCHER, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Office in Wise building.

E. H. NEBLEY, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Office in the Negley Building, West Diamond.

MISCELLANEOUS. C. F. L. McQUISTON, CIVIL ENGINEER AND SURVEYOR. Office near Court House.

B. F. HILLARD, GENERAL SURVEYING. Mines and Land. County Surveyor. R. F. D. 49, West Sanbury, Pa.

L. P. WALKER, NOTARY PUBLIC. Office with Berker, next door to P. O.

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heats the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. Druggists sell the 50c. size; Trial size by mail, 10 cents. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment.

Announcement. To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids to the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spray tube, which is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation.

With a drawl smile at the idea, she picked up her gloves and card case, took a last comprehensive survey of herself in the cheval glass and then passed down the stairs and out into the street filled with the gentle exhalation that her view of life induced.

One did not view, for instance, what chance an atomizer might have even in the pursuit of so banal a duty as a report of formal calls. Missing thus, she turned into Fifth avenue, her face alight with eager expectancy of the next thing and trying to imagine what it was going to be.

This might be the great day of her life—one couldn't tell. Perhaps before the afternoon was over she would meet the man who had broken her heart a dozen calls, but the beauty of the thing lay in the fact that one couldn't be sure! Perhaps on that very afternoon—

These pleasant speculations suddenly came to an abrupt end. Her card case—where was it? She felt blindly in her muff, thrust her hand into one of her pockets and there it lay, but in vain. It was gone—lost—just as numerous purses, opera glasses, boxes, muffs and umbrellas had gone before it, until she was left with only her friends and the gifts of her intimates were invariably accompanied by a beseeching: "Don't lose this, Cynthia. Do try to be a little bit careful."

And now her new card case, a gift on her birthday a few weeks before, had gone in the usual way, just when she was expecting to use it for the first time. Her optimism disappeared like the sun behind a cloud, and with an aggrieved sense of misplaced trust, her steps slackened and she came to a standing halt in front of a door which would while to go back and try to find it.

"Scarcely," she decided, as the moving crowd of pedestrians thronged past her, and with a sigh, she resumed her way northward once more, a little comforted by the reflection that, after all, some honest person would find her card and return it to her.

Meanwhile a tall, athletic young man who was swinging up the avenue in the same direction a block or so behind her, unconsciously enjoying in his mere physical vigor and not philosophizing at all, found his attention attracted by a small, dark object oriented with the center of the sidewalk that was lying near the edge of the sidewalk.

Picking it up, he glanced in this way and in that, but he was making their way in both directions gave no indication of distress, so he examined the monogram on the clasp, with a grunt of masculine disgust, he dropped it.

Then he bethought him that it might be a good idea to open it, and, suiting the action to the impulse, he discovered in one compartment a card oriented with the center of the sidewalk, and in the other, a bunch of cards, "Miss Willard, No. 4 West—th street," he read, taking out one of the cards. And, having thus satisfactorily established the ownership of the card, he tucked it into his pocket and strode on toward the University club, idly wondering if this Miss Willard could be related to that Cynthia Willard he had known in his boyhood. It was this wonder that impelled him to wait to see Miss Willard personally when, just before the dinner hour, he stopped at the address given on the card.

He had not long to wait. A tall girl with a look in her eyes that said plainly that life was an interesting experience, stepped out of the door, and he himself face to face with what seemed to him a larger, older and greatly glorified copy of the small, freckled girl upon whom his moments of rare generosity he had sometimes bestowed his boyish approval.

"Why, Jack Mayhew," she exclaimed with unfeigned gladness, extending her hand to the taller man, "I have been waiting for you from" from" from" his heavy "Jupiter, Cynthia, if this isn't luck!" uttered with enthusiastic heartiness while he conscientiously scanned her face.

And he had been that of another man, placed then at once on the plane of good fellowship where they had parted ten years earlier.

In their delight and surprise at the greeting they talked volubly and sometimes both at once, asking about boy and girl friends and referring hilariously to the time when they had parted. But if their tongues were busy their minds were doubly so.

"He's magnificent!" Cynthia was saying over and over to herself, with a contented smile that was represented by the fact that she was so busy looking at you that I forgot what I was saying. Don't know where I'm at."

At this plain avowal they both laughed, and he went on with masculine frankness: "I say, you've done yourself proud. You're slipping, you know?" And he gazed at her with so much of the old boyishness in his face that the reproach that rose to her lips was suppressed. The girl, in this, thought suddenly clutched at her.

"You aren't married, are you?" she demanded so abruptly and intensely that she withered the moment the words were out, while his prompt negative was tempered with a certain shame as he recalled some events of the previous year. Cynthia was so direct that she inspired him with a desire to meet her on her own ground.

"No, I'm not married, but I am afraid that I should have been except for the firmness of the young lady's mother," he acknowledged honestly. "She had other views for her daughter. You see, I wasn't rich enough, and I'm mighty glad I wasn't now."

PEARSON B. NACE, 318 S. Main St., Butler, Pa. Livery Feed and Sale Stable. Rear of Wick House Butler Penn's. The best of horses and first class rigs at low prices on hand and for hire. Best boarding and transient travel. Special care given.

Stable For 65 Horses. A good class of horses, both drivers and draft horses always on hand and for sale under a full guarantee and horses bought upon proper notification by

PEARSON B. NACE, Telephone No. 21.

Watches Cured of all their ills. Our treatment is quick, sure, cheap.

Ralston & Smith, 110 West Jefferson St.

LIFE'S GRAB BAG BY KEITH GORDON. Copyright, 1904, by Keith Gordon.

"Life," meditated Cynthia as she looked at the ends of her veil more neatly "is nothing more than a grab bag on a huge scale. Day by day you put your hand in and grab something, but until you take it out and unfold it you never know whether it is a joy or a sorrow!"

With a drawl smile at the idea, she picked up her gloves and card case, took a last comprehensive survey of herself in the cheval glass and then passed down the stairs and out into the street filled with the gentle exhalation that her view of life induced.

One did not view, for instance, what chance an atomizer might have even in the pursuit of so banal a duty as a report of formal calls. Missing thus, she turned into Fifth avenue, her face alight with eager expectancy of the next thing and trying to imagine what it was going to be.

This might be the great day of her life—one couldn't tell. Perhaps before the afternoon was over she would meet the man who had broken her heart a dozen calls, but the beauty of the thing lay in the fact that one couldn't be sure! Perhaps on that very afternoon—

These pleasant speculations suddenly came to an abrupt end. Her card case—where was it? She felt blindly in her muff, thrust her hand into one of her pockets and there it lay, but in vain. It was gone—lost—just as numerous purses, opera glasses, boxes, muffs and umbrellas had gone before it, until she was left with only her friends and the gifts of her intimates were invariably accompanied by a beseeching: "Don't lose this, Cynthia. Do try to be a little bit careful."

And now her new card case, a gift on her birthday a few weeks before, had gone in the usual way, just when she was expecting to use it for the first time. Her optimism disappeared like the sun behind a cloud, and with an aggrieved sense of misplaced trust, her steps slackened and she came to a standing halt in front of a door which would while to go back and try to find it.

"Scarcely," she decided, as the moving crowd of pedestrians thronged past her, and with a sigh, she resumed her way northward once more, a little comforted by the reflection that, after all, some honest person would find her card and return it to her.

Meanwhile a tall, athletic young man who was swinging up the avenue in the same direction a block or so behind her, unconsciously enjoying in his mere physical vigor and not philosophizing at all, found his attention attracted by a small, dark object oriented with the center of the sidewalk that was lying near the edge of the sidewalk.

Picking it up, he glanced in this way and in that, but he was making their way in both directions gave no indication of distress, so he examined the monogram on the clasp, with a grunt of masculine disgust, he dropped it.

Then he bethought him that it might be a good idea to open it, and, suiting the action to the impulse, he discovered in one compartment a card oriented with the center of the sidewalk, and in the other, a bunch of cards, "Miss Willard, No. 4 West—th street," he read, taking out one of the cards. And, having thus satisfactorily established the ownership of the card, he tucked it into his pocket and strode on toward the University club, idly wondering if this Miss Willard could be related to that Cynthia Willard he had known in his boyhood. It was this wonder that impelled him to wait to see Miss Willard personally when, just before the dinner hour, he stopped at the address given on the card.

He had not long to wait. A tall girl with a look in her eyes that said plainly that life was an interesting experience, stepped out of the door, and he himself face to face with what seemed to him a larger, older and greatly glorified copy of the small, freckled girl upon whom his moments of rare generosity he had sometimes bestowed his boyish approval.

"Why, Jack Mayhew," she exclaimed with unfeigned gladness, extending her hand to the taller man, "I have been waiting for you from" from" from" his heavy "Jupiter, Cynthia, if this isn't luck!" uttered with enthusiastic heartiness while he conscientiously scanned her face.

And he had been that of another man, placed then at once on the plane of good fellowship where they had parted ten years earlier.

In their delight and surprise at the greeting they talked volubly and sometimes both at once, asking about boy and girl friends and referring hilariously to the time when they had parted. But if their tongues were busy their minds were doubly so.

"He's magnificent!" Cynthia was saying over and over to herself, with a contented smile that was represented by the fact that she was so busy looking at you that I forgot what I was saying. Don't know where I'm at."

At this plain avowal they both laughed, and he went on with masculine frankness: "I say, you've done yourself proud. You're slipping, you know?" And he gazed at her with so much of the old boyishness in his face that the reproach that rose to her lips was suppressed. The girl, in this, thought suddenly clutched at her.

"You aren't married, are you?" she demanded so abruptly and intensely that she withered the moment the words were out, while his prompt negative was tempered with a certain shame as he recalled some events of the previous year. Cynthia was so direct that she inspired him with a desire to meet her on her own ground.

"No, I'm not married, but I am afraid that I should have been except for the firmness of the young lady's mother," he acknowledged honestly. "She had other views for her daughter. You see, I wasn't rich enough, and I'm mighty glad I wasn't now."

FARM GARDEN SEED CORN. Don't Gather in Too Early—The Critical Time in Storage. By P. G. HOLDEN, Iowa Experiment Station.

When we realize the possibilities that are wrapped up in a single ear of corn and then make careful selection we can in a few years greatly increase the value of the corn crop.

Do not select the ears intended for next year's seed too early in the fall.

The typical wood lot and the sort by far the most common in New England consists of a natural forest. If it is properly managed it will reproduce itself indefinitely. No tree planting is necessary. In many places, however, even in Massachusetts, tree planting is necessary, practicable and profitable.

There is another area planted with Scotch pines and larch, mature twenty-five years old. One of the best artificial plantations is of pure larch twenty-four years old. These trees were set in rows four feet apart with trees about two feet apart in the rows. They have done very well indeed and are producing valuable timber.

How the Native Draft Horse Has Been Improved to Highest Rank. In connection with the exhibit at the world's fair the department of agriculture of Belgium has issued a brochure giving some interesting facts in regard to agriculture. The breeding of draft horses is an important feature in Belgium, and it appears that the provinces of Belgium have for a long time possessed regulations relative to the improvement of their draft horses, some of which date as far back as the eighteenth century.

The provincial regulations have a double aim—first, to eliminate from the breed the stations which do not possess the qualities desired to improve the breed to which they belong; second, to encourage by means of money bounties the preservation of the animals which are the best of the breed, of both male and female, of native breed.

It is owing to this selection of the breeding sires that Belgium is in possession of a breed of draft horses of the highest quality.

In 1886 the Belgian Draft Horse Society (Le Cheval de Trait Belge) was founded. This association has a double object in view: first, to encourage the breeding of native horses by the organization of annual national shows, (b) the keeping of a stud book of Belgian horses.

Every year an exhibition is also organized in one of the agricultural districts of Belgium as well as a great many exhibitions of agricultural animals of all kinds. These shows of local interest are held.

Agricultural Notes. "Money in the farming" is the latest cry, but farmers must be strong and well managed.

Good keeping elder cannot be made in warm weather. In making elder for use as a beverage to keep during the winter months it should be made as late as possible, preferably in freezing weather, out of good apples, of course, and raked off after being allowed to settle two or three days, after which it can be exposed to cool weather and allowed to thoroughly chill, then stored in a cool place. It will keep a long time without fermentation. The elder must be sweet for a long time before it is used for a pasteurizing process, or else some preservative must be used.

A FARM WOOD LOT. A constant Forest Necessary—Reproduction and Succession. By FRANK A. WATSON, Iowa Experiment Station, Massachusetts.

One of the commonest shortcomings in farm management of wood lots is the failure to take care of them with regard to their reproduction. Constant forest should be had to the future composition of the wood lot. The valuable species should be allowed to bear seed. Young oak seedlings should be favored. A good growth of oak can sometimes be secured from sprouts coming up from stumps (copious reproduction). Chestnut reproduces itself vigorously in this way, especially where young trees are cut close to the ground.

It will be noticed also that some species follow each other in a definite succession. On waste land, recently cut over areas or abandoned farm fields, birch and poplar are usually the first to appear. As soon as these trees have formed a forest cover, other species come in. Pine, oak and hemlocks belong to this second crop. Comparatively worthless species may thus be taken

THE DRAGON FLY'S EGGS. Any one who has watched a dragon fly fitting about the shores of small, reedy ponds or near the shores of large ones during the summer and early fall months, has seen the dragon fly depositing its eggs in the water. It is a common sight to see the dragon fly dipping the extremity of its long body in the water as it skims along. The dragon fly thus engaged is always kept in a position of the body which keeps the body in the water as it deposits an egg. The specific gravity of the egg is such that it sinks to the bottom among the weeds.

Her Purpose. "Mother thinks you'll make me a good wife," said the girl's intended. "Indeed," replied the girl, "I have determined just now. You tell your mother I'll make you a good husband."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Entirely Useless. Agent—Buy a burglar alarm? Mr. Man—What the deuce do I want with a burglar alarm when my wife hears them every night without one?

Spent no strength in worry. You need it all for duty.—Aton.

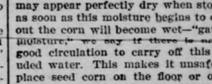

Superstitions That Still Abide With the Country Folk. There is a superstition of a breed with dark blotches on it, not unlike blood stains. I have been twice assured with the utmost seriousness by an old woman that "where you see a dark blotch on a growing tree, there's a battle long ago."

The same dame once seemed rather in a hurry when buying a setting of eggs from me about a year ago, and I found the reason was that she believed you had no luck with eggs if you did not set them before sundown. This is curious, for, though the modern poultry keeper might make the nest and place the eggs in it during the daytime, he would probably defer putting the "broody" on them till dusk wanted, as growing there's the best chance of setting down quietly.

The other day in a neighboring cottage I was admiring a fine baby and ventured to suggest that the mother had left so long it might scratch its face. The mother said she would cut them, but the grandmother burst in with: "You'll do nothing of the sort, my dear, for the child will not set its teeth on a mother's face. You don't seem to know, sir, that to cut a child's nails before its twelve months old makes it light fingered." And I am perfectly sure that the mother would be cut. It will be of interest to add that the cottagers I speak of live near enough to London to see its lights in the sky.—London Chronicle.

Talked Too Much. Speaking one day of club sociability, Hy Mayer, the cartoonist, told of a club to which he was invited while in Berlin. The club was composed of elderly Germans, who met in a back room to drink beer and smoke. At intervals one of the club members would remove his pipe from his mouth, and his head sagely and remark, "Yah." After a little pause another of the smokers would say, "Yah." That was the end of the conversation. "One night," said Mr. Mayer, "one of the members brought his son to the club. After several of the older ones had spoken as usual, the young fellow came forward and said, 'Yah, yah.' They expelled him at once," concluded Mr. Mayer, "for talking too much."

An Effective Whistle. A popular English writer was wholly incapacitated from work by a lady who lived next door and strummed through the night. He had the idea of the inutility of an Englishman's house did not allow him to send in any message, and he was at his wits' end till he saw in a daily paper that steam whistles could be bought to fit on to kettles spouts. He provided himself with one and put the kettle on the fire in the room nearest the singer. As soon as the whistle began to wobble off, of course the bottom came off the kettle, but it cost little to solder it on again, and after two or three solderings the lady took the hint.

GOOD SHAPE OF EARS. If husked before the ears are fairly well matured the ears will not have so much food stored up, and consequently their vitality will be weakened. Experiments have proved that corn allowed to fully mature on the stalk gives the best results.

It gives the best results. If husked before the ears are fairly well matured the ears will not have so much food stored up, and consequently their vitality will be weakened. Experiments have proved that corn allowed to fully mature on the stalk gives the best results.

There was an ecstatic silence for a second, during which the patron of art found the two decidedly interesting from an artistic point of view. It was an eloquent moment—and paintable. It was really a pity. Then the girl's face dimpled and she began to speak.

"Jack," she said, and her tone was a caress, "isn't it lucky that I got you out of the grab bag after all?" The patron of art moved away, shaking his head as if the times were getting beyond him. "Got him out of the grab bag," he murmured, just to see how it would sound—"got him out of the grab bag!"

A Bill That Never Passed. Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member of the House of Representatives was very much afraid he would be knocked out in the approaching campaign. He had not managed to make himself a power in Congress, and he was in danger of being thrown out of office. He was very much afraid he would be knocked out in the approaching campaign.

"Look around hard to find. Exploration of Chinatown," says a close observer, "is one of the most interesting things you can do in New York. I have seen gray haired Chinamen all right and one or two with fuzz on their faces which might by courtesy be called beards, but a gray cue never. A good deal of the average cue is all make believe anyway, several inches of the end of it being composed of black hair."

"I have always suspected that there was more or less false hair about it, too; but that is of course a matter that cannot be determined by casual inspection. Such Chinamen as I have seen with gray hair have had black cues. It may be, however, that the ends of the cue, instead of being false, are dyed."—Philadelphia Record.

Southern Manchuria. The St. James's Gazette says: "The rainy season in southern Manchuria is not so dry as it has been represented to be. Residents of long experience state that while there are days in which heavy falls of rain take place there are not many consecutive days in which the sun is out. There are, however, a few really heavy downpours of rain of some hours' duration occurs it is almost invariably followed by three or four weeks of splendid, dry, bracing weather. There is no finer summer climate in the world than that of southern Manchuria. The temperature in the shade is seldom above 88 degrees."

His Blunder. "Yes; she and her husband have quarreled. It seems he told her she was just too sweet for anything since their marriage."

"Well," she was insulted, of course. That was as much as she wanted. "Just too sweet for anything always."—Exchange.

Ending the Problem. "Dickie, when you divided those five caramels with your little sister did you give her three?"

"No, ma. I thought they were five. That was as much as she wanted. I began to divide!"—New Yorker.

Main Point Settled. "They have called two doctors in for consultation."

"And do the doctors agree?" "I believe they have agreed upon the 'new'."