SMASHING AN IDOL

By CYRUS DERICKSON

While visiting her aunt in the city in the late spring Miss Hattie Saunders, daughter of Farmer Saunders of Redford county, attended the theater several times, and for a special reason she attended one particular play three different times. The special reason was because the hero captured her heart within fifteen minutes after the curtain went up. In the four acts of the play he rescued his love, killed three men, rode a bucking broncho, got the best of a land shark and found a million dollars in gold in a cave. He was a man to do and to dare, and when he shouted "Zounds!" and "Sdeath!" whole tribes of hostile Indians had to flee before him. While the country maiden fell in love with Colonel Bings and adored his hero...

SMASHING AN IDOL

By CYRUS DERICKSON

It took five minutes to assure him that he was in no danger and to coax him down, but the gooseberries were not yet at hand when a mother goose showed a disposition to attack him, and he climbed a fence and left poor Hattie to save her own life or pray by inches. The matter did not end there. He had almost recovered his equanimity and was seeking after a pose when a bumblebee bobbed up and did business. Colonel Bings was lifted a foot high, but instead of coming down to conquer or die he descended to utter half a dozen curs words and reprove Hattie for the grin on her face. Most girls would have made up their minds then and there that Colonel Bings was no hero, but Hattie Saunders did not want to do him injustice. She gave him more rope. That evening as she swung in her hammock she remarked that she had always thought she would make a great actress and asked him for an honest opinion. "It's all both," he replied as he dozed off, "you have a good face, a night's lodging. 'You haven't got the face or the form, and you'd make a dead failure of it in a week. Better stick right here till you can marry some lusty fellow."

Miss Hattie closed her eyes for a moment to blush, and when she opened them again her idol lay shattered on the grass. She had been so much worshipped and was ready to love, but the veneer had peeled off, and her mahogany hero was only plain pine. He remained in bed for three more days, and there were days when he stretched out his arm and cried, "Back, you sons of Satan, or die!" But the girl could not recall her reverence and enthusiasm when the fortnight was up he went, and Hattie queried of her father: "Papa, do you think Colonel Bings is a hero?" "I guess he is," replied the old man. "He went away owing me for the last week's board."

A Jewish View of Inspiration. The question of revelation is always involved in discussion concerning the contents of the Bible. The ambiguity of this term has been a stumbling block to the idea of the supernatural were detached from it. The old theology must certainly count with the indisputable fact that the personal characteristics, the temper and disposition and the variable range of intellectual culture and spiritual insight are the inseparable conditions controlling every manifestation of human intelligence. When it is conceded that the Bible speaks in the language of man the idea of a miraculous revelation is abandoned. In the case of the Hebrew prophets the nature of the psychical process leading their oracular messages is not difficult to understand. The intensity and clearness of their moral and religious convictions and the irresistible urgency to proclaim them felt as an impelling force not their own, but coming from a higher source. Jeremiah and Ezekiel in a less enthusiastic state of mind acknowledge that the divine law is written upon the heart. In fact, every liberation of thought is a revelation. Spiritual experience can be named on the programme, and the noblest thoughts that the wise and good in every age have felt and taught—Memorah.

Miscellaneous Menandants. Here are some characteristic stories among miscellaneous menandants. "Could you help a poor fellow today and the Lord save ye?" said a beggar to a Dublin publican. "Get away!" cried the landlord. "I've had a dozen of your kind here today, and I don't give her the best of it." "Shure, and it's meelf that sadly knows how the profession is overrun," replied the beggar. "Quite recently the following conversation was had between two old crones: 'Good morra to ye, Mrs. Fogarty,' said one. 'Good morra, kindly, Judy,' replied the other. 'I hope I see you well this mornin'?' 'Oh, very well, entirely! So, Mrs. Fogarty, your married yer daughter Kate. Did she prase be a good match?' 'A splendid man, prase be to heaven! She got Blind Darby Dwyer on her feet, and she has more money than any three beggars in Cork.' 'Ah, thin, but it's me that's glad to hear yer news! And did ye give her anything?' 'Stiks, did, then, didn't I give her the best of it?' 'Patrick stork, which if well begged is worth siven and sixpence a week?' 'Upon me word, but 'tis ye that was generous!' So, Mrs. Fogarty, your married yer daughter Kate. Did she prase be a good match?' 'A splendid man, prase be to heaven! She got Blind Darby Dwyer on her feet, and she has more money than any three beggars in Cork.' 'Ah, thin, but it's me that's glad to hear yer news! And did ye give her anything?'
