SEED CORN.

No person can grow as good seed for

And certainly when he finds it necessary to purchase seed he should not have to go far from home. People say seed "runs out." They say a change of seed is necessary; they say that they must bring in new varieties from a long distance in order to increase the vigor. A scientist and practical farmer, Professional Section 1981. or Andrew M. Soule of the University of Tennessee, affirms that all these things are untrue. Seeds, he says, run out because they do not receive the are and attention on the average farm process of development:

Corn has been grown on the same farm and on the same land for years and years and has gradually improved throughout the whole period. Notable examples of this are found in the case of Boon County White, developed by Mr. Riley of Thornton, Ind., and Early Leaming, developed by J. S. Leaming of Wilmington, O. These va-rieties, through intelligent selection, have become two of the standard va-rieties of the great corn belt. Professor Soule recommends the farmer to produce his own seed corn because it is a needless expense to pur soil and climatic conditions it will give a larger yield and prove more satisfac tory if he selects it so as to keep the type uniform and the quality and yield up to a certain standard.

Probably it is more important that the farmer produce his own corn seed than the seed of almost any other crop than the seed of almost any other crop because the plant is so susceptible to climatic influences. Notice the differ-ence between the characteristics of corn produced in the semitropical regions and of that growing in Minneso-ta. In the tropics the stalk is enor-mous. Under irrigation in Mexico of-ten from three to five large ears are obtained, and the stalks frequently reach a height of from eighteen to twenty feet. In Minnesota, on the other hand, the ears are small, and the stalk is not more than from five to eight feet high. A well established variety of river bottom corn, such as Huffman, when grown on uplands frequently proves unsatisfactory. The studious farmer has noted that the variety of corn that does well on his neighbor's farm may not do as well his neighbor's farm may not do as well on his. He has also observed that corn brought into Tennessee from Iowa or even from Ohio does not do well the first year, though it may do better the second and third. On the other hand, he has sometimes observed that corn brought from neighboring states and countries is an attract follows. All these counties is an utter failure. All these things plainly teach us that the farmer should pay attention to the selec-tion and development of corn for his own locality and for his specific needs.

Practical Teaching.

To practical farmers one of the striking and valuable features of the world's fair have been the demonstrative lec-tures by the foremost agricultural corn judging, and C. P. Bull of Michigan explained the ways of improving the small grains. A beef judging class was taught by Professor Burnett of Nebraska, illustrated by a number of prize winning cattle. The testing of dairy herds was demonstrated with cows from show herds by A. J. Glover of Illinois. The star demonstration of the course was the test of the block value of steers on foot by John Goslin of Kansas City, an expert butcher, which was followed by his audience with intense interest. He showed, one by one, on the live animal the significance of various points and immediately verified his conclusions by means of the slaughtered animal.

KEEPING APPLES.

h Common or Cool Fruit Houses an

By J. J. BARTON. The local warehousing of apples has attained an exceptional development apple grower of this section lately remarked that he would about as willing fruit house, holding thousands of barrels, as in a commercial cold storage An example of the frame fruit storage houses in the region mentioned is built with double walls, with a partition between. The space between the partition and outer wails is filled with awdust, while that between the partition and inner wall is kept a dead air space. The temperature of the storage room is regulated as far as possible by opening and closing the windows, according to outside conditions. Sudden and wild starts on alarm would have been positively dangerous to Other types of common storage houses in use in different parts of the country, while built on the same principle of in-introducing air from the outside on days when it is sufficiently cold. It is now generally conceded that practically all varieties of apples keep best when put into storage as soon as picked. Some varieties, such as Hub-bardston, may color up better if allow-ed to lie on straw on the ground for awhile, and this practice may be allowable with apples that are to be soon used, but is apt to be at the expense of the keeping quality. Only good fruit should be stored. Storage does not improve quality. A very useful summary of the experience of practi-cal men in keeping apples is that of

The distracting headaches from which so many women suffer make life a daily purgatory. If men suffered with headache as women do, business would be almost at a standstill. Does not the fact that women only suffer from these severe headaches suggest that there must be a womanly cause for them?

When the womanly organism is diseased, headache, backache, nervousness and sleeplessness are consequences which are sure to follow.

Why Horses Have and Donkeys Have Not the Shying Habit, Horses shy because they are descended from ancestors accustomed to roam over plains, where any tuft of grass or bush might conceal an enemy waiting to spring on them. Under these circumstances they must often have saved themselves by at once starting away o observing any sudden or unexpected movement or on coming without warning upon some strange object. This is supposed to have become a habit which has descended to their domesticated descendants.

The donkey, on the other hand, is descended from animals which dwelt in the hills, among which there were precipices and dangerous paths, hence the sure footedness and comparative slowness of the donkey. His ancestors were not so liable to sudden attacks of have been positively dangerous them. Hence they learned to avoid the very habit which proved so useful to
