Dr. Lawrence's remarks were heartly applauded which was very gratifiying to him, as he has been a close student and hard worker. He is now in his 51st year. When he was a boy of sixteen he walked twelve miles through the mud of Butler county, one rainy day, with satchel in hand, and secured the position of apprentice in the CITIZEN office, boarding with his employer. He was a good apprentice, made a good printer, saved his money, educated himself, read medicine and has made a success of its practice. His old friends here have heard with pleasure of his success in life.

The Milonovitz murder case was colled for trial, Friday morning, and came to an untimely and unlooked for continuance. Paul Milonovitz the prisoner, was brought into Court but was not arraigned. After a jury had been selected and Judge Galbreath or dered the attorneys to proceed with the grass, the defence started trouble by offering a challenge as follows:

"The defendant challenges the array of jurors because the jury wheel was not kept in the custody of the jury commissioners and secured as required by the Act of 1834, but that the jury wheel has been lying unsecured in the rooms of the County Commissioners."

It was followed by a motion:

"And now, June 16, 1905, the defendant may have an opportunity to pet and examined without being sworn."

The Court said any objection to the jury and the way of drawing the jury and the way of drawing the jury and the way of drawing was satisfactory to both should have been made while that was being done. He understood the manner of drawing was satisfactory to both sides, and it was his belief that it was altogether legal.
