BUSSINESS OPPORTUNITIES,

EARLY CELERY.

Fertilizing Forces the First Crop an The stalks shown here are representa tive individuals from two plots in a comparative manurial experime one on the left is from the observable of the usual way with commercial manure, containing plant food constituents in the ordinary proportion: Nitrogen, 5 per cent; phosphoric acid, 7 per cent; potash, 12 per cent. The stake of the hypnotized, or over persuaded, into accepting a substitute. on the left is from a plot fertifertilizer above three applications of pounds each nitrate of soda a equally divided intervals during the growing season. This was distributed and immediately cultivated into the soil on each side of the row.

NITRATE OF SODA ON CELERY.

The specially treated field was ready for market the latter part of June and because of extra early maturity at a time when good stocks were scarce sold for 55 and 60 cents per dozen. This field was cleared July 8, ground leveled and a second crop planted for fall harvest. The field not receiving nitrate came on the market considerably late and, although good stock, netted only 20 and 25 cents. We were not able to double crop this field as we did the nitrate plot.-Orange Judd Farmer.

ENEMIES OF CROPS.

Causing a Peculiar and Subtl Shrinkage In Profits. Fighting insects demands a bette system of farming, which of itself will pay in other directions, and the Ameri-can farmer must calculate upon insect depredations as no small element in his business. Of what use is it to rear two blades of grass where but one grew before if he is to lose both of them by reason of insect attack? It is not the farm, but the profits thereof that are lost through the devastations caused by injurious insects, and it feed these insidious foes than it doe to educate his children.

Throughout the United States, where the smaller cereal grains—wheat, rye barley and oats—are to any considerable extent cultivated, a multitude o injuries to growing wheat are charged by the average farmer to the Hessian fly, whereas in many cases these ravages are really the work of insects whose habits differ greatly from those of that insect. Indeed, some of them are not files at all, and even where the ravages are caused by flies these are ravages are caused by flies these are not necessarily the Hessian fly, and the same remedial and preventive measures that are applicable to this notor ous wheat pest may not be at all effective against them.

To be able to distinguish between some of the chief insect enemies of cereal grains, and especially between many of them and the Hessian fly, may help farmers to prevent a peculia; and subtle shrinkage in the profit of their labor and one they can meet in many cases by simple measures.

Inoculating Alfalfa, Correspondent: "We have some bunches of alfaifa that came up below the hen yard three years ago that look fine; we cut three times. A strip tha was seeded was not a success except n spots where it was rich soil.' Comment by Rural New Yorker: "Pul up one of those alfalfa 'bunches' and see if you can find the little warts or hodules on the roots. If you can the soil around those plants will be good to inoculate a larger field. When you seed again dig the soil around these vigorous plants and scatter it over the field to be seeded. It may mean a good 'catch.'"

A Sauerkraut Center. The making of sauerkraut of late few places in the United States, single factory having an output of 25 000 barrels in two months and a half In fact, it is claimed that even in Ger many there is no one spot where there is as much kraut made as there is in a small Ohio town. At Clyde, O., the product of about 1.800 acres of cabages is annually utilized, each acr rielding about ten tons. These cab bages usually bring $6 to $7 a ton. The farmers of the vicinity therefore often receive $100,000 for this crop

The manure of neat cattle, like that hogs, is variable in character, bu is generally poorer than that of other farm animals on account of its large percentage of water. It decomposes slowly and develops little heat.

AN INTERESTING TREE.

Native American. The shellbark hickory is perhaps the nost interesting tree we have, because it is a strictly American tree and so wedded to its native soil that it refuses to become a citizen of any other untry. In the sturdiness of its roots and trunk, in the boldness in which it flings out its tough branches, in its strong individuality of character and in its general fruitfulness, not forget-ting its uncouth roughness of bark, it further manifests its strong American ism. Its winter buds are large and in-teresting. Early in spring the dark brown outer scales fall away. The in-ner scales then lengthen to protect the growing leaf, sometimes attaining a length of five inches. These inner scales are marvels of beauty both in texture and in color. The body of the scale is thick and leathery, while its surfaces, especially the inner, are soft, with a silken nap gorgeously dyed in yellow, orange and red, suggesting the Region Cease Their Work. DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE PICLS.

Childhood to Womanhood and Later

When the Organs of the Pelvic

When the child changes from girlhood to womanhood and again later in life when the organs of the pelvic region cease their work, there is a strain thrown upon the nervous system, that requires outside aid that there may be supplied a proper amount of additional strength and resistive power. This Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills do to a certainty by their ability to supply to the nervous system and the organs affected, an amount of nerve strength and energy that enables them to accommodate themselves rapidly and easily to the changes taking place.

Mrs. Julia Rowland, of No. 264 Pearl

Mrs. Julia Rowland, of No. 264 Pearl St., Buffalo, writes: St., Buffalo, writes:

"Both myself and daughter, aged 17, are deeply indebted to Dr. A. W. Chase and his Nerve Pills. They certainly are a grand tonic to the nerves I used them about a year ago, to give me the strength and vitality to go through the ordeal that usually comes to woman at change of life, and found all the nervousness, crying spells rnd weakness disappear in a hurry. This led me to give them to my daughter about the time she began to have the endless trouble some girls do in early life, and the medicine began to have the endless trouble some girls do in early life, and the medicine acted equally as well with her. She grew strong and steady—the color became good—the languor and lassitude disappeared and she was able to go about her school duties as usual. I consider the Dr. A. W. Chase Nerve Pills unequaled as a nerve and general tonic in such cases and gladly recommend them to others who suffer in a similar manner."
