The Republican primary election weeks from next Saturday. nakes the time too short for the andidates for the Legislature to see all the people, who, in great part, will have of them by their reputations. The good work of rescuing the state government from the hands of a lot of ses, and making it "ours" has been well begun. Let us keep it up. Town Council

Those who wended their ways to the Council Chambers Monday evening to witness the exit of the old Council and the advent of the new will not soon forget what they saw and heard. It was another history-making evening in municipal affairs.

The old Council met at 7:30, disposed of a large number of regular monthly bills for February expenses, and held over one or two small items for investigation.

The most important matter before the retiring Council was the ordinance of the Pittsburg and Butler Street Railway Co. asking Council to grant them a franchise over Chestnut street between Cunningham and Jefferson Sts, thus giving them a loop on which to tourn their cars. This matter had been hanging in the balance for a month past, the sticking clause with the street car people being one inserted by City Solicitor Campbell providing that an acceptance by the Pittsburg and Butler Company meant that the Butler Passenger Railway Co. would release their claims on Clay, Mifflin, North. Wayne, Water and Race streets, which they are pushing with the purpose of keeping the Butler and Harmony company out of the town, and withdraw their objections before the State Department at Harrisburg to the Butler and Harmony company using Wayne, Water and Race streets. Councilman Lantz was on his feet first for the Pittsburg and Butler company and made a speech which grew so wild that he was finally called to order. George Heard of Pittsburg, who is secretary and treasurer of the Pittsburg and Butler company and manager of the Butler pasenger Railway Co., made a speech in which he told the Council that his companies, and mone company, that there was no connection between his companies, and he told the Council that his companies were not fighting the Butler and Harmony company, that there was no connection between his companies, and that if Council would only grant them the small piece of street they asked for they would then give the Butler and Harmony company terms by which they could reach Main street. Council man Greenert said that the Council of the people of Butler was the only body which should control the terms by which any company could reach Main street, and that Council should keep control of those terms. Solicitor Campbell was called upon, and briefly outlined the situation in a way that made it plain to all. He said the small piece of street asked for by the Pittsburg and Butler company was in itself unimportant, but if granted it made them masters of the town for all time, and now was the critical moment which should determine whether the town should control itself or be controlled. Chairman Millinger asked what he advised them to do. Campbell replied, "Do nothing until they give up these claims to streets they are not using," and applause broke from the audience which packed the lobby. The Pittsburg and Butler people then withdrew their ordinance.

If the work of the special session of the Legislature recently held was good it may be safely predicted that the next regular session will be better. In other words, there are indications of, an aroused public conscience in all sections of the state, which will secure to the next Legislature a body of men who will strive for wholesome legislation and hold out against all that is victous.

HARRISBURG NOTES.

Governor Pennypacker signed the McClain personal registration bill for third class cities and five other bills passed by the recent extra session of the Legislature. This leaves the Philadelphia "ripper" repealer and the bill regulating the assessment of poll taxes yet to be acted upon within the time Ilmif, which expires March 15. Other bills signed.

How a Famous French Advocate Won a Hopeless Murder Case.

Maitre Lachand, the famous advo Maitre Lachand, the famous advo-cate, was perhaps the greatest master of comedy in France, and not a few eminent actors envied him his marvel-ous powers of mimicry. He was once employed to defend a murderer, against whom the facts were hopeless-ly clear.

When his pathetic appeals and his tears—which were always at call when he pleaded before a country jury—failed to touch his stolid audience, he resorted to the most impudent piece of trickery. Thrusting his moistened white handkerchief into his pocket, he lemanded if the jurors were men, if hey had human hearts, if they could bring themselves to condemn a fellow man like the accused, whom he had redited with all sorts of chivalrous if not saintly merits. His eloquence was not merely fruit-less, but the jury responded to it at first with uneasy shuffling, then with biting lips, and finally with loud and ncontrolles bursts of laughter. Lahand, while flinging about his hands, had intentionally dipped his fingers into the great inkpot in front of him, and as he drew his right hand across his forehead, as if in agony of despair at the certain fate of the accused, he left ipon his brow an enormous black ark like a crescent moon and drew two other black traces down his cheeks as he put his fingers to his eyes to dash away the tears.

Feigning high moral indignation at their conduct, he continued: "You are about to decide whether one of your felmen shall be thrust by you out of the ranks of the living, and you choose such a moment for indulging in cruel and thoughtless laughter. Is this extravagant mirth a fitting mood in or shall not die?" The argument actually told upon the
