THE gold output of the Rand district in South Africa has steadily increased since the Boer war and is now considerably above the highest production before the war. But at the same time the market prices of shares in the Rand mines have fallen over one-half, or a shrinkage of about $650,000,000. This incongruity is not explicable by market conditions. The Boer war was brought on by the mining interests because the Boer Government would not frame its labor laws to supply practically enforced labor of the natives in the mines. After the outrageous aggression has been pushed to completion at overwhelming cost to the British taxpayer the Rand mining companies are finding that the British Government will go no further in enforcing contract labor in the mines than the Boer Government did. Various propositions for coolie labor have been advanced and some in South Africa has steadily increased even experimented with. But when they had to stand the light of parliamentary debate the support of the Gov-ernment had to be withdrawn from them. A Terrible Revenge.

For fiendish ingenuity the murder of Frank Getzner, an employe of the J. B. King plaster works at New Brighton, Staten Island, who was killed early last Saturday morning by being tied to a revolving shaft by his companions, has monably never been surpassed.

Five or six of the night shift were questioned by the Coroner about the death of Getzner, and as their stories did not agree he ordered them all under arrest. The man known as No. 203 was not among those arrested and the police for him.

A Strange Killing.

George Mitchell, a youth who recently shot and killed Franz Edmund Creffield, a "Holy Roller" prophet, and was acquitted of the charge of murder on a plea of insanity, was shot and killed by his sister. Esther, in the Seattle, Wash., Union station, last Thursday.

Esther Mitchell joined the "Holy Rollers" sect at Corvallis, Ore., and was one of the most ardent of Creffield's followers. When her brother pursued the leader of the "Holy Rollers" to Seattle, and shot him in the street, he pleaded in justification that Creffield had deluded and wronged his sister. George Mitchell was acquitted of the charge of murder on Tuesday, and nearly all of the following day he spent in searching for Esther in Seattle lodging houses. She refused to be comforted after the death of Creffield.

Miss Mitchell was arrested shortly after her brother fell dead by her hands. She had refused to have anything to do with her brother since he shot Creffield to avenge Creffield's treatment of her Thursday was the first time the brother and sister had been seen to geter on apparently good terms. After the shooting, Perry and Fred Mitchell, two brothers, were arrested as witnesses. They were found together on a bench in the station sobbing on each other's shoulders.

Esther Mitchell made the following

Esther Mitchell made the following Esther Mitchell made the following statement.

"Mrs. Creffield and I talked over? the matter of killing George. The one that had the test change was to do it. Mrs. Creffield bought fine gun. We were at the room about 4 this evening and I thought I would have a better chance to do it than Mrs. Creffield, as my brother wanted to see me, and believed that he would think nothing about my going to the depot. Then Mrs. Creffield gave me the gun and I was to do it. We agreed that it must be done as soon as possible. I went to the depot and saw Perry get his ticket. At last I saw George and I shook hands with him. He and Perry were walking in front and Fred and I were walking behind. I was walking to the door and George was in front of me. That was the chance I wanted and I shot him. My brother Fred grabbed me and I sat down on his lap and put my arms about his neck. I sat there and the officer came. I intended to follow him to

"The Little She-devils."

Anent the Thaw shooting, a lot of the ankest kind of nonsenae is being writ-en and printed about the allurements and temptations to which the poor, in-Anent kind of nonsense is being written and remptations to which the poor, innocent eborus girls are being subjected by the men of wealth and sensuality. Editors are moralizing on the degeneracy of morals and ministers are shouting themselves black in the face over the wrongs perpetrated on the little shedevils back of the foot-lights. In all human probability much of this sympathy is undeserved. One chorus girl, who was interviewed on the subject, after exacting a promise that her name would not be mentioned. as it would cost her her job said: The principal fault is with the girls themselves. Most of them are anxious to have millionaires introduced to them. Temptations? Nonsense! They are hunting for such temptations. Chorus girls run no more right of being led a stray than girls in any other walk of life. There are certain men to whom the trical managers cannot deay certain privileges. Stanford White was one of these. He built Madison Square Garden and was vice president of the company that owned it. Consequently he had a right to go anywhere he liked. Most chorus girls considered it a great feather in their caps to be seen with Stanford White or any of his associates. He was generous to an extreme. If he had a pet in the show she could entertain the entire company at his expense. Every girl knew what his attentions on one occasion he gave a litter dinner to a lot of girls, each of whom found a $20 gold piece under a box of candy at her plate. There was not a girl there who did not know what delicate hint was hidden in that gold piece, and when they were given to understand that things would come pretty delicate hint was hidden in that gold piece, and when they were given to understand that things would come pretty lively before the night was over, and that any one who did not care to contribute her share might leave her $20 gold piece and go, those who stayed did so because they wanted to stay."—Ex.

Fifty men employed in the factory have been arrested, pending the investigation of the Coroner and police.

The body of Getzner was found by the day workmen, stripped of its clothing and beaten to a pulp by being whirled and threshed against the beams of the roof and the machinery beneath. It was almost unrecognizable.

Gatzner was in charge of the night shift, whose duty it is to clean up the mill each night and have it ready for the day force to begin work. His force consisted of about 50 Poles and Italians. About a week ago Getzner reported one of the men, who is only known as "No. 203," to Superintendent S. W. Fancher for being lax in his work. The superintendent reprimanded the man before his companions. Getzner was told to see that No. 203 performed his fall share of the work. Getzner carried out his instructions and during the last week he had narrowly escaped death three times by "accidents" caused by the carelessness of his fellow workmen. That night the night shift gathered up the short bits of rope used to tie salt bags and made a rope of about 25 or 30 feet by tying the bits together. Saddenly Getzner was seized by his companions and, while he was held, some one tied the rope about his feet and ankles.

If the official report can be believed the yery perfection of sanitation and cleanliness which was to make life on the isthmus as safe as anywhere olse is proving more deadly than yellow fever itself. The argument is that the Jamaican negroes, accustomed to do without fresh air and well ventilated, transition much as the tramp was supposed to in the ancient joke when conronted with a bath. COPPERPLATE ENGRAVING.

The Art Was Discovered Through the Merest Accident.

Every one has noticed on his visiting card the extremely delicate lines of his name, and almost every one knows that they are produced by printing from an engraved copperplate. Like many other things of use and beauty, this art of copperplate engraving was discovered through the merest accident by the goldsmiths of Florence in the fifteenth century. It is a historical fact, however, that one day an engraver on gold, wishing to take a proof of er on gold, wishing to take a proof of his work, made the usual sulphur cas and then filled up the lines with lamp black, thus enabling him to see exactl how his work looked.
